Angry Teachers Near B.C. Strike

Rolls Starts Layoffs

LONDON (AP) — The Rolls-Royce Co. announced today a big layoff of workers as the United States and British governments tried to work out the future of the firm's RB-211 jet engine.

Rupert Nicholson, the accountant named to unravel the British firm's financial affairs, said 4,300 employees, many of them white-collar workers, would lose their jobs in the next three weeks.

"The reduction is independent of the RB-211 situation and does not take into account the possible cancellation of the RB-211 program," Nicholson said in a statement.

If the engine—for the American Lockheed Corp.'s TriStar airliner—is scrapped, Rolls Royce's layoffs will be much higher.

The layoffs were ordered at Rolls-Royce plants at Derby and Barnoldswick, England, and at Glasgow, Scotland. The figure represents about 5 per cent of the company's labor force.

REPORT EXPECTED

Nicholson announced the layoffs shortly before Aviation Minister Frederick Corfield was to make his report on prospects of saving the RB-211, whose development costs caused the financial crash which put Rolls-Royce into the hands of a receiver.

Malcolm Muir, Rolls-Royce's aero-engine sales manager in the United States, flew here today from Lockheed's California plant and said the American firm is "moving away from us" over the RB-211.

Muir urged the government to approach Lockheed urgently and "construct an offer which will meet the requirements of the airlines which have ordered the TriStar." Air Canada is one of the airlines.

Muir warned that the airlines, who have been asked to pay more for the TriStar to absorb some of the RB-211's runaway development costs, would not wait for protracted negotiations between Lockheed and the British government on a final price.

"It can only be a matter of hours or at most days before one of the airlines decides it has had enough and then it will be all over," Muir added.

Halifax Dock Idle; Esquimalt Working

Dockyard workers at Halifax went on strike Sunday morning but their Esquimalt counterparts are holding back until March 15.

The dispute involves different pay rates between the two federal dockyards and different raises offered by the treasury board and rejected by the 2,900 workers.

The men, members of the Dockyard Trades and Labor Council, an association of 11 craft unions, gave 75 per cent over-all approval to a strike, although the Esquimalt vote was 63 per cent against. Because it is a national bargaining unit, it is the national vote which counts.

The 1,700 Halifax workers set up picket lines today around the dockyard.

"The fact that the Esquimalt council favored March 15 as a strike date should not be misconstrued as a sign of disunity but merely taken as a request for more time to set up strike machinery," the council said.

Tom Graham, west coast president of the council, said "no comment" when asked to explain why Esquimalt men are continuing work for one week.

Dockyard workers turned down a federal wage offer which would have increased Esquimalt tradesmen rates by 84 cents an hour over two years while increasing Halifax rates 54 cents in the same period.

Tradesmen rate at Esquimalt now is $4.16 an hour compared with $3.31 in Halifax, a difference of 85 cents.

Labor rates were offered an extra 66 cents an hour in Esquimalt and 46 cents an hour at Halifax, over two years. Labor rates now are between $3.29 and $3.50 in Esquimalt and between $2.70 and $2.86 in Halifax.

U.K. Postal Appeal: Delay Mailing Letters

LONDON (AP) — Less than half of Britain's post offices reopened today after the system's workers voted overwhelmingly to end their costly 47-day walkout.

Postal chiefs appealed to the public to hold back all but urgent mail for a few days so they could clear the backlog of 11 million letters, plus another 60 million piled up in foreign countries. They said service might not be back to normal until the end of next week.

(In Victoria, post office officials said word was awaited on lifting of the mail embargo before any mail could be forwarded to the United Kingdom. The go-ahead was expected later this week.)

About 1,000 of the 1,700 main post offices did not reopen today because their staffs had to be trained in the new decimal system for money and stamps that came into effect during the strike. Limited deliveries of first-class mail were expected today, but second-class letters will not be handled until the backlog is cleared.

DECIDES PAY SCALE

International telephone services requiring operator assistance and rural exchanges with operators were expected to be back to normal within a few hours. But all pay phones won't be available until full coin boxes are emptied.

Telegraph service resumes Tuesday.

More than 190,000 of the 205,000 members of the Union of Postal workers voted to go back to work, leaving the fate of their pay demand in the hands of a three-man commission. The vote by union branches was 1,059 to 61.

In the vote, the strikers also agreed to a large-scale overhaul of the postal service to increase its efficiency. Cuts in the daily deliveries and parcel services were reported in the offing.

$100,000 REWARD IN CAPITOL BLAST

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. congressional leaders today offered a $100,000 reward for the arrest and conviction of the person or persons who set off a bomb in the U.S. Capitol last week.

The reward announcement followed a meeting of leaders of the House and Senate to discuss tightening security of the Capitol in wake of the bombing, which heavily damaged several rooms in the Senate wing in the early morning of last Monday.

Mid-East Troops On Alert

Times News Services

Arab and Israeli troops were placed on full alert Sunday night as the seven-month Middle East ceasefire came to an end.

Egypt Sunday moved 100,000 members of its army into position along the Suez Canal to confront the Israeli forces which have occupied the east bank since the 1967 six-day war.

A military spokesman in Tel Aviv said there was no fighting along the 103-mile Suez canal. Journalists were barred from the area, but there were no indications hostilities would resume.

Israel had expressed willingness to extend the truce indefinitely. But Egyptian President Anwar Sadat announced hours before the deadline that his forces no longer would be bound by the ceasefire which first took effect last August. It expired at midnight Sunday night.

Sadat said he had decided not to extend the ceasefire after conferring with Soviet leaders during a secret visit to Moscow last week.

HAS RUSSIAN SUPPORT

"I came back completely satisfied and confident that the Soviet Union supports our cause for liberation and a just peace to the utmost limit," he said in a broadcast.

"We shall no longer be bound by the ceasefire agreement, or can we pledge to refrain from shooting," Sadat said. "But this does not mean that the guns will be fired tonight or that diplomatic efforts will stop."

The armed forces of Egypt, Jordan and Syria went on alert.

The Egyptian government charged that Israel had deployed new artillery, armor, rocket pads and air force squadrons in the Sinai Desert. Cairo also announced that Egyptian army and air force units had completed 18 hours of manoeuvres with live ammunition.

The Jordan army's chief of operations, Brig. Zeid Ben Shaker, said all his troops and armor were positioned along the Jordan River the ceasefire line with Israel.

An Israeli source said Syria, which was not included in the truce pact, had moved armored reinforcements into the Golan Heights area on the biggest scale since the 1967 war.

The Israelis said several rockets were fired from Syrian territory at an Israeli collective farm on the heights

U.S. NOT NEEDED IN NORTH THRUST

WASHINGTON (AP) — State Secretary William P. Rogers said today the United States would not intervene if South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu decided to invade North Vietnam.

"There's no reason, when the South Vietnamese are as strong as they are, why they should be under any restrictions militarily," Rogers said.

He made the statement while reviewing the Indochina situation before the winter conference of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

He did not elaborate.

Jittery Gunman Cancels Hijack

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) A jittery young gunman hijacked a National Airlines jet aircraft today at Mobile, Ala., forced the crew to fly him north toward Montreal, but then decided in flight to surrender.

"The FBI took him off without any trouble," said an airlines spokesman after the plane landed in Miami.

The arrest came shortly before noon, or almost three hours after the man boarded the Boeing 727 at Mobile, ordered 38 passengers and four stewardesses off and demanded to be flown to Canada.

The airlines announced the plane was headed for Montreal. A short time later it was announced that plane had turned around and that the hijacker planned to surrender in Miami.

ARMED WITH PISTOL

The FBI said the youth, identified as Thomas Kelly Marston, 16, of Mobile and charged with aircraft piracy, was armed with a 38-calibre pistol.

Authorities said the man was accompanied to the Mobile airport by an attractive girl. They said the couple started toward the boarding ramp, stopped and appeared to argue and the girl turned and ran through the gate while the youth boarded the plane.

At that point, officials said, he pulled a pistol and forced stewardess Barbara Avery to take him into the cockpit where he demanded that he be flown to Canada.

He permitted everybody but three crew members to get off the plane.

Unless Pensions Changed

A general strike of British Columbia teachers is likely this month unless the provincial government amends its proposed legislation on teachers' pensions.

The British Columbia Teachers Federation executive will be watching for second reading of the legislation, known as Bill 4, which could come this week.

Les Isaacson, president of the Greater Victoria Teacher's Association said today a meeting of BCTF executive Saturday reaffirmed its resolve to call a strike unless changes are evident in second reading of the bill.

ORIGINAL FORM

If Bill 4 is adopted in its original form, the executive could give final authorization to strike, Isaacson said.

Earlier, teachers voted to give the BCTF executive power to call a strike at any time on the pension issue.

Federation president Jim Killeen said after the meeting:

"We were pleased with the deal offered long-service teachers, but the paltry increases offered our retired teachers are just not good enough."

FIRST READING

Under legislation given first reading last month retired teachers would get increases ranging from $10.50 to $21 a month.

The 200 delegates at the Saturday meeting also directed that a campaign be undertaken to have teachers indicate their support for the BCTF. The campaign comes in response to proposed amendments to the Public Schools Act, introduced in the legislature by the government a week ago, which would make membership in the federation voluntary instead of automatic.

The federation will also challenge the legality of another amendment which would prevent teachers from running for the office of school trustee.

Janitors Sign Pact

Janitors, tradesmen and grounds staff employed by the Greater Victoria school board voted 66 per cent in favor of a new contract Sunday night.

Alex Markides, a staff representative for the Canadian Union of Public Employees, said today "the threat of a strike is averted." Sunday night's membership meeting followed a full day of negotiations.

He declined to release details of the new agreement until they are presented to the school board tonight.

One week ago, the employees voted 94 per cent to reject a 7.9 per cent wage increase over two years and arrangements for Saturday opening of schools.

QUEBEC ISSUE RAISED AT UBC

Hecklers Halt Turner Speech

VANCOUVER (CP) — About 30 demonstrators protesting the federal government's use of the War Measures Act in last October's terrorist kidnap crisis in Quebec heckled and shouted down Justice Minister John Turner Saturday night at the University of British Columbia.

Turner was delivering a speech as part of the Vancouver institute's weekly UBC lecture series. The topic of the speech he was prevented from making was "violence in modern society."

After the outburst, which included several scuffles between deomonstrators and other persons in the audience, Mr. Turner told newsmen he was very disturbed.

"They seem to have replaced logic with slogans . . we've had disruption instead of dialogue," he said.

TURNER
. . . 'our violent society'

In the text of his speech, released to newsmen earlier, the minister warned Canadians that "we'll have to face the threat of violence for some time in our society."

Later, Turner said: "I've run into a lot of heckling but this is the first time I've ever been prevented from speaking."

He said he wouldn't want to legislate against the kind of demonstration that disrupted the meeting.

"This is a necessary risk of free discussion," he said. "I'm only disappointed that the

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Newfoundland teachers have voted 70 per cent in favor of continuing strike action to back up demands for wage increases from the Newfoundland government.

about two hours before the ceasefire ended. No casualties were reported.

Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban denounced Sadat's decision as the "most negative attitude toward the ceasefire which possibly could be taken." But he added that if Sadat had intended to frighten the Israelis, "we are quite unimpressed."

He emphasized that Israel still will abide by the original ceasefire call in the June, 1967, UN Security Council resolution that helped bring the 1967 Arab-Israeli war to a halt. In the two years that followed, the situation along the canal deteriorated steadily, with more and more cross-canal raids and air strikes occurring. In an effort to create a climate conducive to peace negotiations, the United States sponsored a new ceasefire.

ST. IGNACE, Mich. (UPI) — A bus driver was killed and eight persons hospitalized with injuries when a bus carrying a group of Ontario residents returning home from a lodge meeting crashed into a snow plow near here Sunday night.

State police said the driver of the bus, John Mills, 42, of Blind River, Ont., died of injuries in War Memorial Hospital at Sault St. Marie four hours after the accident.

Dutch Statesman To Get NATO Post

WASHINGTON (WP) — Dutch Foreign Minister Joseph Luns will be named to succeed Manlio Brosio as the secretary general of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO).

The appointment will not be formally made until the NATO ministerial meeting in Lisbon on June 3 and 4 but preliminary approvals have been obtained from all NAOT governments.

Luns is expected to take over the post this fall, succeeding Brosio, an Italian diplomat, and former ambassador to both Washington and Moscow, who has held that job since 1964. His predecessors were Britain's Lord Ismay, Belgium's Paul-Henri Spaak and the Netherland's Dirk U. Stikker.

SOUGHT POST

Luns actively sought that top civilian post in the Atlantic alliance once Brosio, who will be 74 in July, let it be known he would like to retire.

Luns, who will be 60 in August, has been a Dutch diplomat since 1938 and foreign minister since 1952. His tenure makes him the senior foreign minister in the western world, if not the whole world.

The six-foot-six Luns, prolific in several languages and voluble on almost any topic, has a reputation as an ardent backer of the Atlantic alliance, of a militiarily integrated NATO and of western European political integration. This background makes him highly regarded in Washington as a staunch friend of the United States.

BEST KNOWN

Luns long has been the best known abroad of Dutch statesmen, generally eclipsing the prime ministers. He had hoped to win that post some day but never made it.

Since the beginning of what is now a 15-nation alliance, NATO has always had a European secretary-general, the top political post, and an American military chief beginning with Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower. There was some talk a year or more ago of switching this lineup but no change was made. Andrew J. Goodpaster is currently the top military man.

IRISH DOGS SHOOK UP

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — A marked increase in the number of dogs suffering from "nervous breakdowns" in this riot-torn city has been noted by the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Aminals.

"Animals are very sensitive and the sudden explosions, shootings and noise can play havoc with their systems," an SPCA official said.

Protest Bubbles

MARSEILLE (AP) — Hundreds of French wine growers blocked trains in parts of southern France protesting the government's price and import policies. The wine growers are protesting price restrictions on low-quality wine and the importing of wine from Algeria.

Shadow Mischief

Domestic Air Fares Increased

OTTAWA (CP)—A new domestic rate structure that increases Canadian passenger rates for Air Canada and CP Air went into effect Saturday.

Air Canada is owned by the federal government and CP Air is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Canadian Pacific of Montreal.

The two companies filed notice of the rate increase with the Canadian transport commission a month ago. As the commission has not intervened the fares automatically became effective Saturday.

When the airline filed notice of the increases, they said world-wide inflation and rising costs have had an adverse effect on the aviation industry. They said they plan to file for increased freight and express rates soon.

Under the new rates, the price of each economy-class ticket will increase $2 plus one-tenth of a cent a mile. On some short-haul routes the increase will be limited to $2.

There will be additional increases on some flights between more than two points but the $5 stopover charge will be dropped, compensating to some extent for the increase.

Youth standby and senior citizen fares will rise to 66.2 per cent of the normal economy rate from 60 per cent. There will also be an increase in the charge made for each piece of luggage carried in excess of the free baggage allowance.

Drug Program Support Urged

NANAIMO (CP) — Mayor Frank Ney said Saturday the whole community must support the school board in bringing an elementary school drug education program into effect as soon as possible. The Nanaimo MLA said Education Minister Brothers has told him a program will likely be ready for September.

British Leyland Recalling Cars

TORONTO (CP) — British Leyland Motors Canada Ltd. says it is recalling 7,555 Austin America compact sedans for replacement of a brake system valve.

The cars involved are from the 1969, 1970 and 1971 model years. Dealers will replace the valve at no cost to owners.

The company said an improperly operating valve causes reduced efficiency of the reserve braking system "in the unlikely event of front braking system failure."

Romania, France Step Up in Class

EINDHOVEN, Holland (CP-AP) — Romania and France both qualified Sunday for Group B in the world hockey championships at the 1972 Winter Olympics at Sapporo, Japan.

In final Group C play Sunday, Romania crushed Britain 11-2 and France trounced The Netherlands 9-2.

The top two teams from Group C gain admittance to Group B play in the world championships.

In other games Sunday, Hungary blanked Denmark 2-0 and Bulgaria whipped Belgium 12-1.

Andretti's First

JOHANNES BURG, South Africa (UPI) — American Mario Andretti won the South African Grand Prix, first of the 1970 world championship series, at the Kyalami Track Saturday. The former Indianapolis winner scored his first Grand Prix victory driving an Italian Ferrari. Second was 1969 world champion Jackie Stewart of Scotland.

Johnny Carson Sick

NEW YORK (AP) — Johnny Carson has entered a New York Hospital for treatment of hepatitis. The National Broadcasting Co. said it was not known how long the star of the network's late-night talk show would be laid up, but that Joey Bishop, who once had his own talk show in competition with Carson, would replace him for the duration.

DRAGSTERS PLAN

Officials of Van-Isle Dragways announced that the first drag-racing meet of the 1971 season has been scheduled for April 25 at the Cobble Hill track.

A total of 13 meets will make up the season which ends Oct. 3.

Nixon in Trouble; Poll Ratings Slip

WASHINGTON (WP) — President Nixon is in trouble politically. His poll ratings have slipped down to 51 per cent approval — which is an amber light area for an American president and just above the danger zone.

Other signs of discontent with his policies at home and abroad are multiplying.

Last week, Mr. Nixon gave some obvious signs that he knows he is being pressed. At this point, the troubles are restrained and his responses were restrained, but just the same the portents are worth pondering.

BEHIND OTHERS

One thing to remember is that Richard Nixon as president has never been nearly as popular as his recent predecessors, Dwight Eisenhower, John Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson, at the beginning of their terms of office.

Their initial gallup ratings were up around 70 per cent approval; his was 59 per cent approval even in the "honeymoon." Like other public officeholders, presidents generally pick up opposition as they go along — and Mr. Nixon had very little margin for slippage from the beginning.

Two months ago, Mr. Nixon's close associates on the White House staff recognized that his popularity had begun to sag, but they looked forward to the stare of the union and his "New American Revolution" to excite the country, give him a dynamic, forward-looking image, and turn the trend around. It hasn't happened.

Without question, the Laos invasion hurt.

For all the military logic and the claims of success, most people find it hard to understand how widening the war contributes to shortening the war.

For the first time, there is a substantial skepticism that Mr. Nixon really intends to get out — all the way out — of Vietnam.

Mr. Nixon's public threats to North Vietnam and his refusal to limit American airpower may or may not have impressed the North Vietnamese leaders. But they came across loud and clear to many Americans, and it sounded depressingly like 1965, 1966, 1967 and early 1968 all over again.

On the economic front, the Nixon strategists expected and continue to expect a strong upturn. It hasn't happened yet.

The manifestations of all this are beginning to appear. Last week in Des Moines, the centre of a Republican heartland, a construction worker in a yellow hard hat was carrying a hand-made sign, "impeach Nixon."

He stood next to a farmer protesting low hog prices, and students shouting against the war.

There were at least a thousand, probably a couple thousand farmer-hard hat-antiwar pickets, and virtually no public support for Mr. Nixon in sight. Somebody said he finally managed to "bring them together" — in protest.

The final scene was last Thursday night in the east room, a presidential press conference called to convince the doubting public that the Laotian operation will shorten the war. Mr. Nixon was less confident that usual, less forceful, less convincing. He kept eyeing the cameras over the heads of the reporters, as if he yearned to leap through the lenses into the living rooms and take the public by the hand. Perhaps he was trying too hard.

LEARNED LESSON

He began carping at the press, something he foreswore in 1968. He said then that he had learned his lesson, and he played "let me call you sweetheart" on the piano to the reporters. It was a long time ago.

A bad trend, a bad poll, a bad week can be exaggerated. Spring is coming. One swallow does not make a summer. You can't beat somebody with nobody. There are lots of comforting thoughts and cliches available.

Still, the signs mean something. Unless things begin to go his way, the country will be seeing more of Nixon-at-bay.

'Parochial' Victoria Criticized

Mayor Courtney Haddock declined to comment today on criticism by Capital Region chairman Hugh Curtis that Victoria is taking a parochial attitude to regional development.

Curtis rapped Victoria for failing to send a representative on a day-long tour of district hospitals Saturday. Representatives from all other administrations in the area took the trip.

"The city of Victoria should be looking beyond its boundaries and should be playing a leading role in development of the region," Curtis said.

The tour was the second of its kind, and covered the site of the new peninsula hospital on Mount Newton Crossroad, Rest Haven in Sidney and Lady Minto on Salt Spring.

Brandon Turns Dry

BRANDON, Man. (CP) — While some Eastern Canadian cities shovel out from under the mantle of their heaviest snowfall in decades, residents of this city of 30,000 can't find a patch of snow big enough to make a snowball.

The 1.40 inches of precipitation that has fallen here since Nov. 1 makes this city the driest in Canada. The snow that did fall has melted away and, with the exception of some ice in curbs and gutters, streets are bare.

A spokesman in the Winnipeg weather office said today only Miami, with a precipitation of .63 inches this winter, has a lower precipitation than Brandon among North American cities.

BYLAW PONDERED

Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock says he is considering introducing a "design bylaw" to control commerical building architecture.

Haddock recently criticized the appearance of car service stations on Douglas Street at the corners of Hillside and Bay.

Haddock said a design bylaw would be aimed at "the kind of monstrosities that have been built in our city over the years."

Haddock has not prepared a bylaw but suggested the city might copy one used by Ottawa.

"It won't be easy," he said.

Ratepayers to Meet

The recently-formed Gordon Head and District Ratepayers' Association will meet this evening at 7:30 in Fairburn Elementary, 1841 Fairburn.

The association was formed to fight "spot rezoning" and to press Saanich to establish an official community plan to protect the residential area.

people here couldn't hear the speech."

The minister has offered to answer any questions if the demonstrators would let him speak but they refused.

Bedlam prevailed as he was heckled and had a tomato thrown near him. A couple of fights broke out in the crowd.

Of the more than 200 in attendance, only about 30 were involved in the pre-arranged protest supporting persons arrested under The War Measures Act in Quebec. One of their chants was: "No free speech for the Quebecios, no free speech for Turner."

After giving up his attempts to speak he remained at the front of the theatre for almost an hour answering questions from people who approached him.

He said the people who disrupted the meeting "harmed their cause immeasurably because while the Canadian people enjoy seeing a public figure like myself put on the spot, and that's legitimate, I don't believe they want to see him embarrassed to the extent that he wasn't able to address a free meeting."

Crippled Freighter Out of Danger After Near Disaster With Rocks

VANCOUVER (CP) — A spokesman for Rivtow-Straits Ltd. said Sunday officials hoped the tug Gibraltar Straits would tow the crippled Dutch freighter Antillian Star into Vancouver harbor by Tuesday afternoon.

The vessel was reported about half-way across Queen Charlotte Sound Sunday night with more than 350 miles to go to Vancouver where repairs are planned for boilers which broke down early Saturday, leaving the ship adrift off the southern tip of the Queen Charlotte Islands.

The freighter was being blown Saturday night towards the rocky shoreline by 30-foot waves and 50 m.p.h. winds when it sent out its distress signal.

The small tug Westbridge II was forced back by the storm and the 78-foot Gulf Jean picked up two nylon ropes from the Antillian Star to tow her about six miles from the shore where the second rope snapped under stress.

The first had broken closer to shore.

The 131-foot Gibraltar Straits arrived early Sunday and used the last of 12 rockets for its tow-line launching gun to put a line aboard the freighter.

HEADING SOUTH

The tug and its tow were reported heading south Sunday night at a speed of about six knots with prospects of somewhat better speed once they escaped the 35- to 40-m.p.h. winds and arrived in Johnstone Strait, between Vancouver Island and the mainland.

The Antillian Star and its crew of 31 had been in Vancouver last week for cargo and repairs before leaving for further loading at Port Alberni. She was outbound from Port Alberni with a cargo of sulphur, tractors and newsprint for Korea and the Philippines when she reported losing power.

The captain said he would go to the Queen Charlottes and make repairs but the vessel never made it.

The boiler breakdown left the ship rolling heavily as the storm picked up and at 8:30 a.m. Saturday the captain radioed the Canadian Coast Guard that he needed assistance, but there was no danger of damage to his vessel.

However, by 8:35 p.m. Saturday the mayday distress signal went out, reporting the ship without power and unable to make headway in heavy seas. It was then that the tugs were sent to her aid.

CYCLE GANG WAR LEAVES FIVE DEAD, 23 INJURED

CLEVELAND (AP) — Police prosecutor Everett Chandler prepared riot and murder charges today against some of the 87 motorcycle gang members arrested after a fight that left five dead and 23 injured, including three policemen.

Police said the Saturday night battle involved 150 to 200 members of the Breed and 30 members of the rival Hell's Angels.

They said the fight at the annual Motorcycle Custom and Trade Show was the result of a year-long feud between the two gangs.

The show was being held to raise money for crippled children.

Breed members gathered near three motorcycles being displayed by Hell's Angels and somebody touched off the fighting with a shout of "Now!" police said.

"We didn't know where to turn," said Patrolman Thomas Burton, who was inside the hall when the fighting began. "We just started clobbering everybody."

About 150 police converged on the scene and tear gas was used to break up the mob.

Police said all of the dead and wounded were knife victims. They said gang members also carried chains, clubs and guns.

Three of the dead were Breed members.

Canada May Help Nations Seeking Africa Solution

By DAN TURNER

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast (CP) — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said today Canada may be able to help African countries seeking a friendly solution to southern African racial problems.

Sharp held a press briefing here in the first of the five black African countries he will visit in a two-week tour.

He said he would talk to President Felix Houphouet-Boigny of the Ivory Coast about the southern Africa racial issue, on which Houphouet-Boigny has taken a much softer stand than most major African leaders.

While leaders in Zambia, Tanzania and Nigeria have adopted a policy of confrontation with white-minority governments in South Africa, Rhodesia and the Portuguese colonies, Houphouet-Boigny has called for a "dialogue."

He has support from Ghana, Madagascar and Malawi.

Sharp said that Canada is against violent confrontation in southern Africa.

HAS HIGH HOPES

His talks with Houphouet-Boigny today could be "fruitful" if the Ivory Coast leader made a strong base for the concept that a good-neighbor policy would prompt the South African government to ease off its racist apartheid approach within its own borders, and if Canada could play an honest broker role towards that end.

It is Canadian policy, he said, never to cut off contacts with countries such as South Africa, because then there could be no dialogue. "I would like to explore what we can do."

Some black African representatives had suggested to him at the United Nations last year that Canada might play a go-between role over the racial issue since it maintained an embassy in South Africa.

The external affairs minister will meet three African leaders later on the tour who have rejected the dialogue approach with the white-minority regimes —Gen. Yakubu Gowon of Nigeria, and Presidents Julius Nyerere of Tanzania and Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia.

Tanzania and Zambia are prime supporters of black liberation movements active in Mozambique, Angola, Portuguese Guinea and, to a lesser extent, Rhodesia.

KAUNDA PULLOUT HURT

Kaunda has led his country in a painful withdrawal from economic dependence on Rhodesia.

South Africa has responded to this militance by trying to draw other black African countries into its economic web, through aid projects and trade agreements.

It has succeeded to a large extent with two of its poorer neighbors, Malawi and Mozambique. Ivory Coast, a more distant and richer country, would be a significant addition.

Ottawa Set to Welcome Honeymooning Couple

ALTA LAKE (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau and his 22-year-old bride Margaret were expected to return to Ottawa today, ending a three-day skiing honeymoon on picturesque Whistler Mountain in Garibaldi provincial park.

The newlyweds spent less than three hours skiing Sunday before attending an afternoon Roman Catholic mass with about 20 other skiers in a small chapel at the foot of the mountain.

The 51-year-old prime minister and the former Margaret Sinclair, a daughter of former Liberal cabinet minister James Sinclair and Mrs. Sinclair, were married in a secret service early Thursday evening in North Vancouver.

APPEARED RELAXED

They drove to this small community about 75 miles north of Vancouver following a reception and moved into the Sinclair family's condominium, a modern two-storey structure in a development known as Whistler Alpine Village.

The couple left their honeymoon residence only to ski and made no appearances at any of the three or four licensed lounges and pubs in the area. All had kept a table reserved just in case. The prime minister had sampled some of Whistler's night life during a 10-day holiday here a year ago.

Mr. Trudeau and his pretty wife appeared happy and relaxed as reporters gathered around them on each of their visits to the 6,000-foot mountain.

Reporters had been discreet in not waiting around the Trudeaus' residence and RCMP security men posted nearby had little to do.

The prime minister was asked Sunday about prospects for a federal election in the fall.

"Not very great," he replied. "I'm going to be too busy married."

Mrs. Trudeau appeared to enjoy the questioning of her husband—and his answers. Asked whether publicity surrounding the honeymoon bothered her, she replied: "No, not in the least."

A rumor that the prime minister had injured a leg spread following the couple's first day on the slopes. Attendants at the base of the 3,800-foot enclosed gondola had watched Mr. Trudeau walk away limping, but it was all for the benefit of waiting reporters.

When one asked whether he had hurt his leg, he laughed and said: "I gave you a story."

He was in good spirits again Sunday. When asked to say something quotable, he smiled and said "fuddle duddle." Then the couple drove off in their green station wagon, back to the condominium.

National Body Set For Pollution Study

TORONTO (CP) — A national advisory committee on the mineral industry, to work for pollution clean-ups with economic factors in mind, was announced today by resources minister J. J. Greene.

Environment improvement in the mining and metallurgical industries to date has been carried out largely on an individual basis, Mr. Greene said in a speech to a joint meeting of the Prospectors and Developers Association and the Toronto Canadian Club.

"It is becoming evident that there now is a requirement for a national research and development effort emphasizing co-operative government-industry programs specifically directed to finding more effective and more economic methods of pollution control.

"By sharing a common pool of knowledge and expertise, each company can progress more rapidly in solving what is essentially a local environmental problem.

"In turn, the total progress made in solving all of these local problems contributes to the solution of the national problem of maintaining more uniform environmental quality across the country."

The government has already sponsored a national advisory committee on mining and metallurgical research, grouping representatives from universities, industry and government, Mr. Greene said.

The Community's Need

THE MAIN REASON FOR THE existence of a public library is to provide a collection of books from which the public may borrow. The money appropriation from which newly published books are bought, old ones replaced, and the general collection increased to meet the needs of a growing population of readers, is therefore an important one. Too small a book-purchasing appropriation will have a strangling effect on a library — its stock-in-trade will be reduced, its quality and ability to serve will be lessened.

The Greater Victoria Public Library can be no exception to the application of these criteria. When each year its book-purchasing appropriation is cut by municipal councils which feel the pinch of rising costs, its quality and usefulness as a library must be eroded.

The item for books is the only major one in the Library's budget which permits — arithmetically — much alteration. Wages, building upkeep and operation and such expenses are relatively irreducible. So each year we have a situation comparable to that, for instance, in which the Library should buy a minimum of $80,000-worth of books, this sum is pared to $60,000 by the Library Board which knows the municipal councils will object, and the councils in turn cut the allocation to $40,000.

That type of budgeting has become a pattern here, to the despair of professional librarians who see the institution declining in value despite rising overall budget costs. In recent years some of the shortage has been made up through the use of the provincial government grant. But this was originally intended to improve library services, not merely to maintain them. The provincial government will not indefinitely assume costs which, in effect, are being dodged by the councils.

This year the board asks $130,000 for books for the main library and a further $50,000 for the five existing and projected branches. Objectors to the size of the main appropriation overlook the fact that this sum not only has regard to the growing need for an expanding book collection, but also the fact that the discrepancies of previous years must be made up to some extent. A serious short-fall in any one year can never really be repaired, for the many new publications and the rising cost-per-book prevent much retroactive patching-up.

That is the problem which now faces the local councils. It would be false economy to impoverish the library's book supply, particularly in this year when Centennial branches — agreed to by Victoria, Saanich and Oak Bay — are to be built, largely from federal and provincial funds. The main library and the branches in effect act as a unit: every borrower from a branch has access to the main collection as well as the local neighborhood books, so that all users benefit from an improved book stock. A good public library is an essential part of the educational facilities of a community; its upkeep is as important as the maintenance of the formal schools, and the support given it is an indication of the community's cultural level.

It is becoming evident that the provincial government will have to assume an increasing role in the support of public libraries throughout British Columbia, and efforts are being made to obtain this support. But in the meantime it is the responsibility of local councils to maintain their local library. The provincial government, in reviewing the situation, will naturally be influenced by the extent to which the people and their elected representatives value and support their library. The best criterion for outside help is inside help.

"... but can't you see ... we don't want equality given to us ... we want to take it ..."

The Essence Is Debate

Calgary Herald

The essence of the parliamentary system is debate. The word parliament comes from the French work parler, which means to talk ...

There have always been political leaders who think Oppositions are a nuisance and talk in order to obstruct government policies rather than to shed more light on them. Alberta's former Premier Manning, at times, expressed impatience with a system which hired a government to run it and then hired an opposition to dispute the way things were being done. Mr. Trudeau has given frequent evidence that he thinks the Commons is a nuisance and things would go faster without it.

And, indeed, they would. But that is not what democratic government is all about. Government is not a business corporation. Its operations impinge on every human being under its jurisdiction. Impulsive, computer-style, impersonal, coldly efficient policies are anything but the kind calculated to do the most good for the most people. At the same time, there have to be limits on parliamentary talk. Work does have to get done.

FROM WASHINGTON

By JAMES RESTON

The Illusions Blot Out the Indochina Facts

DEEP down underneath all the surface arguments about what the United States is doing in Indochina something in the American spirit keeps the nation from facing the facts in that tragic peninsula. The truth is too unsettling to the romantic view of Americans and their history. To set a date certain for withdrawing all the way would not, in my view, threaten American honor, or security, or the strategic balance in the world—though this is clearly in dispute—but it would threaten American illusions, slogans and myths.

Reston

The United States is still clinging to the dreams of its youth. Everything must have a happy ending. The U.S. is bigger and better. Money talks. The machine is power and magic — an irresistible god, partner to the "Bitch Goddess Success." All this is in America's fables and every minute in its advertising, and all this has been challenged in Vietnam.

Anybody who ever raised a child or planted a garden knows that life does not support these assumptions, but they are dying hard. Woodrow Wilson said it took only half as long to train an American army, because you only had to teach it to go one way. G. K. Chesterton rejected Stephen Decatur's slogan "My Country, Right or Wrong" because he thought it was like saying "My Mother, Drunk or Sober," but Decatur's dogma still has a large following.

President Nixon is counting on it. He is not facing the facts of geography. He is not dispelling but perpetuating the nation's illusions, and he can undoubtedly do so for a while. But China will never be satisfied until it gets rid of a non-Communist military base close to its borders any more than the United States will ever be satisfied until it gets rid of a potential Communist base in Cuba.

Advertising Campaign

In many ways, the Administration is now following in Indochina the techniques of American commerce. It has mounted a vast advertising campaign to persuade the American people that what it is doing is right, moderate and effective, and in fairness, the men at the top no doubt believe that they are right, and that advertising pays, particularly if you limit objective reporting of the results.

Also, as in commerce, the Administration is now fighting a "discount" war, minimizing the price and passing on part of the cost to the South Vietnamese and the mountain mercenaries. But in some ways it is going beyond these commercial techniques.

Even Henry Kissinger, who has kept out of the public propaganda campaign in the past, went on CBS the other day and argued that even if the Administration was wrong in Indochina, it had to stick with its decision.

"All the tough decisions, the sort of decisions that come to the President," he said, "are very close, and you make your decision on the basis of maybe a 55-45 balance ... Once you've made the decision, you are committed to it or you are stuck with it 100 per cent ..."

But why? If the Soviet Union had stuck with its decision to put nuclear missiles into Cuba we could have easily have had a nuclear war between the giants. And even Henry Ford, who is supposed to have "better ideas," scrapped the Edsel when he discovered it was a "lemon."

Still, even this attitude of Kissinger's is part of the American mythology. "Don't Give Up the Ship" ... "Damn the Torpedoes: Full Speed Ahead" ... "We're No. I" ... "We Try Harder." Who wants to be a "helpless, pitiful giant"? Well, advertising does pay: it has confused a large part of the electorate over Indochina for a very long time, and in the short run and in political terms it may very well serve the President's interests, if not the nation's. No doubt he can hold the line through 1972 in Indochina and even keep a reasonably secure base in South Vietnam with American air power after that if he sticks. But that, he says, is not his policy. His policy is to get out and bet on the South Vietnamese to hold the fort against Hanoi and Peking.

And if he is wrong in this bet, who will explain the sacrifices of the men who die between now and then?

Happy Ending Belief

Still, the point of all this is not that he is perpetuating American illusions to serve his personal political interest—though it could have that result—but that he actually believes in the happy ending, that Americans are bigger and better, that money talks, that machines are irresistible even in the jungle, that China will tolerate on its border what he himself would not tolerate on his own, and that his purpose is virtuous and his ends justify his means.

Well, illusions have their purposes. Eugene O'Neill wrote a whole cycle of plays to prove that they were indispensable and that life was intolerable without them. But in Indochina after ten years? After the heaviest bombing in the history of human conflict? After Lieutanant Calley?

Mr. Lincoln had a better idea: His clear and simple goal was to preserve the Union. "Military glory," he said, "is the attractive rainbow that rises in showers of blood."

Faster Into the Big Red Yonder

REPORTED LOSSES OF $123 millions by 12 major United States airlines last year give point to a private member's bill introduced in the Commons early last month by Mr. Paul St. Pierre, Liberal member for Coast Chilcotin. Mr. St. Pierre would prohibit the use of Canadian airspace by commercial aircraft capable of flying at supersonic speed.

The purpose of his bill, he explained, would be to reduce the threat of air pollution, to reduce the danger of ground damage by supersonic booms and to rule out the possibility of the Canadian airline industry "bankrupting itself on behalf of the technical community's totally irrational passion for speed and gadgetry."

While American lines were flying in the red last year, scheduled carriers were purchasing 128 new aircraft, amounting to a total of $3.5 billion, according to one report. Various reasons were advanced for the losses — among them the impressive statement that too many planes were flying with too many vacant seats — a point illustrated by the cancellation of a large number of flights.

The costs of providing the type of planes desired to keep up with the Joneses in civilian aviation today do not only jeopardize the earning potential of Canadian lines, they also lead to applications for increased fares, both on long and short flights. To save time — only a fraction on short flights — it costs the passenger more money. In this situation, a surprisingly large number of passengers are prepared to lose a little time to save a little money, and to support the Coast Chilcotin member particularly on that part of his argument.

A Black Brain Drain

THE BRAIN DRAIN, A COMMON subject of complaint in Britain and Canada, though it is often an alternating flow, is causing concern among black colleges of the United States. They are losing talented professors and administrators to white colleges — and for familiar reasons. Black professors are frequently leaving black universities for white because the latter offer higher salaries, better fringe benefits, prestige, a more attractive academic setting and often a smaller teaching load.

The result is a source of worry for black colleges, though the flow seems to be dropping off recently. Unable to match the money, prestige and other benefits of white colleges, the black institutions emphasize the possible satisfaction of reaching a maximum number of black undergraduates who need the black professor's knowledge, his sense of achievement and, as some put it, his very presence at the front of the classroom instead of a white professor.

Compounding the problem is the fact that blacks represent less than one per cent of each year's doctoral candidates — and have been in great demand as universities in general have been stepping up Afro-study departments.

The prospect is not at present happy for the black colleges, but it may improve. A few years ago, no one heard of the brain drain from black colleges. The number involved was too small and the demand for talented blacks by white American universities scarcely existed at all. At least now it has reached proportions which could cause pride along with the anxiety.

Doctors' Qualifications

In your March 2 issue I read that Dr. McGeer is reported to have said in the legislature that "the province must admit physicians from foreign countries whose qualifications do not match provincial standards."

How does Dr. McGeer equate this with the fact that all "foreign physicians" wishing to practise in B.C. must not only pass a Canadian medical knowledge examination but also serve a period of internship in a recognized hospital?

As to qualifications compared to Canadian standards, a certain young lady doctor from England was amazed to find that her fellow interns from U.B.C. in a Victoria hospital had never even delivered a baby, whereas as a final year medical student in England, she had been required to deliver 30 babies by herself!

Many of our most capable and respected doctors in Victoria were once "foreigners."—E.F.W.

Protect the Teeth

The government wishes to create a $25 million alcohol, tobacco and drug rehabilitation fund.

In the face of such sedulously fostered clamor it is not surprising that they feel pressed to move against the purveyors of these substances.

But there is another matter which craves national attention, never attracts any clamor and has been doing untold harm, even to toddlers, for generations.

I refer to the consumption of refined sugar and unsuitable foods and their effect upon the nation's teeth.

If Parliament is going to vote any money whatsoever to combat the ill-effects of drugs, tobacco and alcohol they should first vote the necessary amount to educate children and their parents in the opposite direction from rotting teeth. This is a much older problem.—H. H. Bridge, 3904 Shelbourne.

Look Twice

Soon the streets will be flooded with motorcycles — every style and shape from whining Japanese trail bikes to roaring Harley choppers.

A lot of people would like to see our bikes banished from the face of the earth because of the danger involved and the seeming nuisance they cause.

The thing is, we're proud of our bikes and love to ride. When the sun comes out, so do the bikes, despite strangling insurance rates and some irate citizens.

The sad part is that when some motorist doesn't see you coming and pulls out, or over or in, you're lucky if you just bust a leg and arm or two. If you're not lucky it's the vegetable ward or mercifully, the grave.

I dont worry about myself getting hit but it sure hurts every time I see a fellow biker and his machine mangled by a car or truck.

No matter what your attitude towards motorcycles, we have our right to ride and will be on the road, so look twice — once for us and once for bikes. — Robert Storrie, 2080 Milton.

Bouquet

I would like to hand out a bouquet to a very helpful library staff, in particular the "Shut-In" and "Reference Department."

As a shut-in, I enjoy being able to receive so many and varied books each month regardless of the weather. Mrs. Cushion always has a bright smile and cheerful words when she calls.—Shut-In.

Where Is Democracy?

In March 3 Times you had an article called "Indian Students March to Welfare." I am led to believe single Indian students attending the Institute of Adult Studies receive a minimum of $177 per 31 day month from the Federal Government's welfare program.

As I am the president of the Student Council at the Institute of Adult Studies I had occasion this past month to help relocate one of our students (white), who was living in Saanich and was on Saanich welfare. This student received $122.50 per month from the welfare. His rent was $100 per month for a basement suite consisting of a bath, kitchenette, bed-sitting room. The rent included all utilities except phone. Thus you can see after his rent and phone ($4.44) was paid there was a balance of $18 left for food, transportation, clothing and sundries. It should be noted that this student lives within walking distance of the I.A.S. and therefore is not entitled to the $15 per month transportation allowance from welfare.

I am glad the "white man" is looking after the Indian. Trudeau is obviously doing a much better job than is Phil Gaglardi in assisting Canada's uneducated people who are striving to become self-sufficient.

However, it's pretty hard to study when your stomach begs for food. Where is Canadian Democracy? — Charlotte Anne Cody (Miss), President Student Council, Institute of Adult Studies.

Freedom Is Not Free

While citizens reel beneath the continuing assault of internally provoked conflict, we are also intimidated by the very establishment that proclaims freedom and democracy while moving closer and closer to the Big Brother bureaucracy of socialism.

How did it happen? Largely because we forgot that freedom is not free — that the cost is eternal vigilance. We have forgotten that freedom is not a gift of government — but a gift of God; that it does not mean freedom from responsibility but the freedom to stand as a man accountable for his actions.

It does not mean the freedom to push other people around or to elect public officials to do the pushing for us! Freedom is not an abstraction or ideal, but a human right which must operate from the premise of doing what we ought to do because we want to do it, not because we are ordered to do it. — Patricia Young, Vancouver, B.C.

Surprising Similarities

At the public hearing into the application for construction of multiple or row houses in Gordon Head, a number of local ratepayers protesting this real estate development mentioned the similarity between some of the letters supporting this project.

Saanich Alderman Passmore speaking as a member of council, remarked that the petition opposing the proposed development was signed in its identical wording by more than the hundred residents.

Alderman Passmore ignored one important fact in making this statement. Ratepayers who signed the petition opposing the project did so openly and in good faith, whereas some of those people who wrote letters to Saanich Council so similar in composition, although from different addresses, approving the application, seem to have attempted a subterfuge in order to gain their objective. Happily, they did not succeed. — Denis H. Besley, 4360 Gordon Head.

Looking Back

From the Times of March 8, 1911:

Just now Victoria is jocularly termed "the blue-print town," the phrase having been coined because of the fact that nearly every fourth man one meets is carrying plans showing some new sub-division just placed on the market or of lots on sale in various parts of the city.

This is, indeed, Victoria's growing time, for besides the big projects there are innumerable lesser enterprises. The city itself will in all likelihood expend more than two million dollars ere the close of 1911.

'Free Economic Enterprise': Is It Really Free?

By ARNOLD TOYNBEE

In the so-called free world, "free enterprise" is a term that has been restricted tacitly to mean "free economic enterprise," not intellectual, artistic, or religious enterprise.

Free economic enterprise is freedom, within the bounds of the law, for the entrepreneur to win the maximum economic advantage for himself at the expense of weaker competitors. The term free world has been stretched tacitly to include all non-Communist countries, even those that are under tyrannical regimes.

Paying Lip Service

In the free world, thus negatively defined, free economic enterprise has been the normal economic dispensation. Attempts to mitigate it by nationalizing key industries have failed. The workers in nationalized industries have proved to be as deeply addicted to free enterprise as their fellow workers and the employers in industries that have been left in private hands.

Unionized workers who have bargaining power are not socialists in reality.

But today, many countries in the free world are in serious economic maladies — increasing unemployment and increasing inflation — which hitherto have been believed to be mutually exclusive.

Since, in the free wold, unionized workers who pay lip-service to socialism reveal their devotion to free economic enterprise in practice, this institution evidently needs to be reconsidered.

Free economic enterprise has been commended on two grounds.

It has been held to be economically beneficial for society as well as for the entrepreneur himself. It has also been held that all other kinds of freedom stand or fall with it: for instance, freedom to participate in government by voting from time to time; freedom to express one's feelings and thoughts publicly at all times; and freedom to engage in intellectual, artistic, and religious activites.

These two beliefs — that economic freedom is economically beneficial for society and that non-economic freedom is bound up with economic freedom—have been largely based on what has happened in the Soviet Union. Russia is economically backward by comparison with the Western countries and with Japan; and in Russia both economic-freedom and non-economic freedom have been suppressed.

The Russian example has been thought to show that the suppression of economic freedom is economically detrimental to society, and that also it is so contrary to nature, so unjust, and so unpopular that it can be imposed on people only by depriving them of all the other kinds of freedom as well. This argument, however, will not hold water.

Russia was relatively backward under her pre-Communist regime too, and this regime, too, suppressed the non-economic kinds of freedom. Yet the Russian government tolerated, and even encouraged, free economic enterprise, so long as the entrepreneurs did not make political trouble for the tyrannical public authorities.

Moreover, the present-day non-Communist tyrannical governments within the so-called free world behave as the government in Russia behaved. They tolerate politically subservient free economic enterprise, while suppressing freedom in other fields.

Anyway, since free economic enterprise was adopted as the free world's shibboleth, the practical effect has been transformed by two revolutionary changes.

The entrepreneur has ceased to be an individual; he has turned into a business corporation or a trade union; and this has happened because economic operations have been mechanized and consequently have become larger in scale, more costly in terms of capital investment, more highly technical, and therefore inevitably more monopolistic.

This has changed the balance of social power. The individual has lost his former economic freedom, and the community, represented by the government, is in danger of losing its political control. Monopolistic corporations and unions have gained power at the expense of both the individual citizen and the state.

What individuals are now free economically?

Not individual shopkeepers. They are being squeezed out by chain-stores. Not individual industrial workers. They have to do what they are told by their unions or shop stewards. Not the public, of which the industrial worker and the shopkeeper are members.

Power Once Was Puny

When the free economic entrepreneur was an individual, his power to damage his neighbors and the community was tolerated because it was puny. When most people were workers on the land, they could produce their own food and fuel.

As for light, it would have been difficult to bring the public to its knees by unionizing the chandlers and making a corner in candles. By contrast, it is impossible to avoid making a monopoly of an electricity grid, and it is therefore difficult to prevent unionized electrical workers from holding the community at their mercy if the union decides to exert its latent power.

In these unprecedented conditions, it can no longer be argued that economic freedom for the entrepreneur is economically beneficial for society. Business corporations and workers' unions, armed with the weapons of technology, can and do plunge society into chaos, as the electrical workers have recently shown in Britain by depriving the people of light and power in order to enforce a pay claim.

They can and do push their economically defenceless fellow citizens to the wall. They have it in their power to ruin the whole community (including, of course, themselves).

The simultaneous onset of unemployment and inflation shows that unmitigated freedom of enterprise has become baneful, not beneficial, in a society in which employers and employees are banded in corporations and in unions, and in which the world's work has been mechanized.

Moreover, it is now clear that mechanization is still only in its early stages. As mechanization advances towards automation, an ever smaller number of ever more highly-skilled workers, monopolizing the control of an ever more costly and complex apparatus, will hold the majority of their fellow citizens more and more helplessly at their mercy if society does not put a curb on this minority's power by limiting its freedom of monopolistic corporate economic enterprise.

The majority of the members of the community have lost their individual economic freedom already. Why then should the privilege of retaining corporate economic power be preserved for a dwindling minority of technocrats and tycoons?

This privilege is not in the interest of the majority. Nor is it in the interests of the community as a whole.

But can an economically-privileged minority be brought to heel without imperilling everyone's freedom in non-economic fields?

This depends on whether economic freedom and the other kinds of freedom really and trully do stand and fall together; and this is not the truth, as is demonstrated by the experience of non-Communist, tyrannically-governed countries; for instance Russia under her pre-Communist regime and the increasing number of tyrannical governments in the so-called free world of today.

Under these tyrannical regimes, free economic enterprise has been tolerated while freedom has been suppressed in other fields. This indicates that the tyrants' practice can be inverted.

The non-economic kinds of freedom can be preserved while economic freedom is curbed. No one would live, if he could help it, under a regime that suppresses freedom of all kinds; but, if we leave this Communist kind of regime out of account, under which of the two other kinds would we prefer to live, if we had to choose between these? Under the kind that curbs economic freedom but preserves freedom in other fields, or under a regime that, like the non-Communist tyrannies, behave vice versa?

Can't Win Rat Race

Surely we would opt for a regime that preserves the non-economic freedom. The purpose of life is not to make the maximum economic gain for oneself either through one's own individual efforts or through the exercise, on one's behalf, of the baron-like power of a corporation or a union.

A voluntary limitation by the individual's or his corporate representative's free choice is a counsel of perfection; but a compulsory limitation would be far better than the third alternative; for this alternative is a nightmare. It is the running of an ever more desperate life-long rat-race in pursuit of more and more money that melts faster and faster as we clutch at it.

This is a race that it is impossible to win, and to spend a lifetime on running it would be a miserable fate. If we acquiesced in this we should be condemning ourselves to being obsessed with the economic side of life, to the exclusion of all other interests, and this would make life not worth living.

If that is the truth, we must think again about freedom of economic enterprise. We must reassess its merits and demerits with fearless hearts and open minds.

Britain Needs Immigration Appeals

By ANTHONY LEWIS
The New York Times

LONDON — Try to imagine a law authorizing the Attorney-General to deport any alien whose presence he declared would not be "conducive to the public good." Imagine further that the accused alien would have no right to a statement of reasons, a hearing, or access to the court.

Not even the present Attorney-General of the United States would contemplate trying to acquire that kind of unreviewable power over the lives of individuals.

But that is exactly what John Mitchell's nearest British equivalent, the Home Secretary, has just proposed by way of a change in British law. And hardly anyone in this country has blinked an eye.

Reginald Maulding, Home Secretary of the Conservative British government, was thought when he took office to be a particularly amiable man, one who would avoid the pitfalls of excessive zeal that always threaten law enforcement officials. He has turned out to be surprisingly insensitive to — almost uninterested in — civil liberties issues.

But the proposal to give him such sweeping power of deportation — one staggering to the American imagination — has much more behind it than Maudling's personal beliefs. It reflects a deep philosophical difference in the approach to democratic government on opposite sides of the Atlantic.

We Americans like to say that we have a government of laws, not men. By that we mean that the decisions of individual government officials are subject to challenge through a legal process. A written constitution provides a formidable check. The last word very often lies with the courts.

The British system could well be described as one of men, nof laws. And it is not only that there is no written constitution, and therefore no judicial supremacy.

The whole tradition here is to vest broad discretion in individual officials. From the customs man at London airport to the Home Secretary, everyone operates under fewer rules than his American equal. The procedure used does not matter much so long as he reaches a reasonable result.

The theory that justifies such official power in a democracy is the parliamentary system. If a minister goes wrong, under that theory, Parliament will call him to account. Justice Felix Frankfurter, the greatest of American anglophiles, used to talk about the case of Miss Savidge, who provoked an instant Parliamentary outcry when she was questioned improperly by the police. That kind of reaction was the basis of the Justice's faith in parliamentary democracy.

It is an appealing theory, no doubt of it. Any American might admire a country where all the elaborate mechanism of judicial review is unnecessary, where the legislature has the time and sensitivity to correct all a modern society's injustice and administrative obtuseness. But it is only a theory.

When Maudling orders some person's deportation, he has to do so on the advice of his civil servants. But not even they know whether it would stand this test."

Nor is Parliament a real corrective. The House of Commons is so busy these days that very few individuals can hope to attract its attention to a case of claimed injustice. And if members of the House did raise a question, there is no assurance that a Home Secretary would tell even them the real reasons for his actions.

Such considerations led many legal authorities in Britain to feel, in recent years, that Britain should have a system of law in immigration cases: A system of hearings and appeals. Parliament created one two years ago. Now Maudling, moved by a recent case with security implications, has proposed the undermining exception that there shall be no hearing or appeal if he declares someone's presence here not "conducive to the public good."

As long ago as 1903, the American Supreme Court held that the least regarded alien should not be deported "without opportunity, at some time, to be heard." The broad reason for a society to give everyone that right was stated later by Justice Jackson. Fairness, he said, is "not for the sole benefit of the accused. It is the best insurance for the government itself against those blunders which leave lasting stains on a system of justice."

West Germans Resentful Of U.S. Radio Propaganda

By LESLIE COLITT
The London Observer

BERLIN — West Germany has begun to examine its role as host country to foreign radio stations beaming programs to eastern Europe.

Doubts whether their existence is compatible with West German sovereignty have been aroused by recent evidence from Washington that Radio Free Europe in Munich is heavily financed by the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency.

Bonn is also coming under pressure from east European countries which are at the receiving end of the broadcasts. There are two stations, RFE and Radio Liberty, in Munich, the site of next year's summer Olympic Games.

The east Europeans are demanding that the stations cease their propaganda or they will be unable to send their athletes to the Bavarian city.

Ironically, RFE has come under new fire long after it has ceased trying to encourage uprisings in eastern Europe and is concentrating on filling the huge information gap in that area. The station broadcasts in Polish, Czech, Slovak, Hungarian, Romanian and Bulgarian, claiming a listening audience as high as 60 per cent of the population in Czechoslovakia.

The station, which employs newscasters and researchers, most of them exiled east Europeans, came into the news most recently during the December riots in the Baltic cities of Poland.

Making use of its extensive service, RFE was the first western station to pick up the local radio from Gdansk, which was broadcasting an eyewitness account of the uprising.

RFE then beamed the recorded material in its daily broadcast to Poland. The Polish government accused RFE of trying to inflame the situation by appealing to "rowdies" but it quietly let the charge slide in the ensuing party upheavals.

Radio Liberty, the other large American station based in West Germany, broadcasts solely to the Soviet Union. It says that it is privately financed.

So far there has been no official move by the West German government to revoke the licences of the two stations. However, some high Bonn government officials are known to be displeased that West Germany, while following an active policy of detente with eastern Europe, continues to harbor the two American stations.

Chancellor Willy Brandt has remained silent on the matter, RFE and Radio Liberty are considered by President Nixon to be valuable instruments of American foreign policy.

The chancellor would be unikely to antagonize the United States at a time when he is doing everything to avoid arousing American suspicions over Bonn's "ostpolitik," Brandt's policy of seeking improved relations with eastern Europe.

Still, it seems inevitable that with the growth of West Germany's newly discovered sovereignty, the time will come when it will have to invite RFE and Radio Liberty to leave.

Saving History From War

By IVER PETERSON

PNOMPENH, Cambodia — Cambodia's only archeologist is trying almost single-handedly to save Cambodia's vast treasure of ancient temples and statues from the war by bringing them to the museum basement here or burying them if they are too large to move.

At Angkor Wat, the country's most famous centre of ancient temples, streets and statues, over 500 pieces have already been buried with the co-operation of the enemy troops who occupy the area. The basement of the National Museum here is filled with over 200 cases containing thousands of Khmer bronzes and statues, brought from the war-torn countryside by Chea Thay Seng, the museum's curator and the only archeologist left in Cambodia after the departure of the French.

Along with three of his former students Seng has brought the most valuable pieces from seven of the country's 10 provincial museums to Pnompenh and has buried "several hundred" larger statues near the museums and temples they came from.

"It's a work that never seems to end," said Seng, who received his degrees in archeology in Paris. He continued: "The 1954 Hague Convention on the protection of cultural assets warned us to think about protecting our monuments but we never did — we were so sure of lasting peace. It took the North Vietnamese invasion to get us moving."

Safekeeping his country's cultural relics, most of which date from the magnificent and powerful Khmer Empire from the 9th to the 13th centuries, is not Seng's only purpose.

"The whole project is also a kind of test," he said recently, speaking in French. "We are an adult nation. When the Angkor temples were occupied (by the Communists last June) Prime Minister Lon Nol broadcast an appeal for everyone to respect our national monuments."

"We cannot launch appeals for help and then do nothing ourselves," he said, and added, with the dislike of his neighbors to the east common among Cambodians, "we are not Vietnamese, after all."

The only tangible outside help so far has been five cultural experts sent by United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization who came last fall, when the program was getting underway, to advise on cleaning, packing and storing the artifacts. The organization has also contributed packing materials.

Seng says he also has been relatively successful in getting the co-operation of the belligerents in the Cambodian war. Cambodian laborers, wearing the blue and white UNESCO armbands, are permitted into the Angkor Wat grounds by the Vietnamese Communist troops to carry out essential restoration work — the encroaching jungles are always trying to reclaim the monuments — and bury the most precious pieces.

American co-operation was assured in July, Seng said, when a group of professors in Paris wrote to President Nixon, asking him to spare Cambodia's dozens of archeological sites from United States bombers.

Seng said that so far only one important monument had been damaged in the war, and that one in the early days of the fighting by the Cambodian troops.

But while statues and artifacts are being made safe from the fighting, Seng said that thieves and smugglers of statues vastly increased their trade since the war began.

North Saanich Will Agree To Fire Deal

Mayor J. B. Cumming of North Saanich says his municipality is willing to abide by the draft enabling legislation proposed by Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell for future operation of Sidney and North Saanich Volunteer fire department.

The minister's proposal has been found unacceptable by the town of Sidney and Mayor Stan Dear said earlier that the present fire department "will most assuredly disintegrate" under its conditions.

Terms of the draft enabling legislation are:

- Joint ownership by Sidney and North Saanich of all assets, rights and liabilities of the volunteer fire and ambulance service;
- Annual operating costs to be shared by Sidney and North Saanich, half on the basis of taxable land and improvements and one half on basis of population;
- Value of North Saanich firehall property to be reimbursed to North Saanich in five yearly instalments;
- Appointment of a Board of Fire Commissioners, composed of two members from each council with an additional member appointed by the minister from his department;
- Permanent employees deemed to be employees of North Saanich and all accounting and hiring to be provided by North Saanich on a contract basis with the board;
- The right of either council to appeal to the minister on any matter involving operation or maintainance.

Campbell said last week that he would not force his proposal on the two municipalities, but would pass the enabling legislation if they wanted it. Both municipalities appealed for his help in drafting a fire agreement after local talks broke down.

An earlier draft agreement from the minister vested administration of the fire department with Sidney and was accepted by the town but rejected by North Saanich.

Cumming said the second draft agreement is acceptable to no one. "It is, however, a settlement of the dispute and must be examined since there has so far been no acceptable resolution of the difficulty."

North Saanich, says Cumming, is critical of the legislation because although both municipalities will have a half interest, neither has any authority or gain. "Both lose with the minister making vital decisions which will be political decisions."

Lack of fire volunteer representation on the fire board is another disadvantage, Cumming added.

Gulf Islands Pay Heavy Bill

Just under a third of Greater Victoria school districts 1970 operating costs were paid for by ratepayers, but Gulf Island ratepayers paid 72 per cent of their educational bill.

These facts were contained in answers to written questions by Education Minister Donald Brothers who filed them in the legislature Friday.

The education cost-sharing formula between province and municipalities in each school district is calculated from the tax base of the district.

In Sooke, the split was province 73 per cent, ratepayers 27. In Saanich, the province contributed 70.5 per cent, while the ratepayers kicked in 29.5.

Brothers also revealed in 14 cases municipal councils allowed school boards to exceed the maximum shareable 1971 budget set by the provincial finance formula.

Under amendments to the Public Schools Act introduced by Brothers Monday school boards will no longer be able to get the extra money from municipal councils, but will have to submit a bylaw.

If five per cent or 100 of the district's ratepayers contest the bylaw, a referendum must be held to approve or reject it.

Twenty-five of the province's 76 school districts needed extra funds this year. Fourteen got from municipal council, and 11 submitted bylaws, and in four cases referendums were held.

Nation Goals 'First'

TORONTO (CP) — Canada should be concerned that all industries—whether foreign or Canadian owned—help fulfil the goals and aspirations of the people, National Revenue Minister Herb Gray said Saturday at a University of Windsor seminar.

The seminar was one of two weekend study sessions in Ontario cities sponsored by the Committee for an Independent Canada. The other was a conference on Canadianization of post-secondary education held at the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education, Toronto.

Mr. Gray said at Windsor: "Instead of asking whether Canada should cut off all foreign investments, we should be asking how much foreign investment to meet what national objective, in what sectors and under what terms?"

Mr. Gray is supervising a cabinet-level study of foreign investment, but declined to reveal any of its findings.

He said Canada should be concerned "with both how firms perform, in terms of such matters as efficiency and productivity, as well as who controls them."

But it is not enough to restrict foreign investment without at the same time encouraging and developing an indigenous Canadian capacity, he said.

REITERATES POLICY

At the concluding session of the Windsor seminar Saturday, Mel Watkins, leader of the New Democratic Party's Waffle group, reiterated the Waffle policy of public ownership of resource industries as the cheapest method of operating them and the surest way of maintaining Canadian control.

Max Saltsman, NDP member of Parliament for Waterloo, and the federal party's major financial critic, said foreign investment has made Canada poorer and not richer and suggested such investment be restricted totally. If allowed at all, it should be restricted to investors able to make a good case that their firm's investment will benefit Canada.

Charles Hanly, executive vice-chairman of the Ontario Confederation of University Faculty Associations, said foreign professors who don't take out Canadian citizenship after five years should be required to return home.

He also proposed creation of an independent professional body to control admission to the university teaching profession. It would examine applicants, eligibility for university positions similar to the way professions such as law and medicine are controlled.

The Toronto conference was told that Canadian universities should place a moratorium on the hiring of non-Canadian staff until a national policy on faculty has been established.

Professor Henry Beissel, chairman of the department of English at Sir George Williams University, Montreal, suggested delegates form campus committees to persuade Canadian universities to adopt a moratorium on hiring of foreigners. The moratorium is being promoted by the newly-formed National Committee for Canadianization of Canadian Universities.

The Toronto conference, co-sponsored by graduate students at the education institute, was also told that the Canadian government had made a policy to import about half the doctors needed in Canada for the next 20 years.

Prof. Robin Mathews of Carleton University at Ottawa said the government has a policy of training 1,250 doctors a year and importing an equal number of doctors and this policy "should be condemned."

Douglas Wallace, executive secretary of the Canadian Medical Association, said in a telephone interview from Ottawa that as far as he knows, there is no government policy on the matter.

HYDROPONIC FARMING

Bumper Crops From Labs

NEW YORK (UPI) — Commercial farming without soil? Sounds impossible and impractical. But it may be necessary as the population explosion threatens the world with a food shortage.

By year 2000 the present population of 3.5 billion is expected to double. Since only 5 per cent of the earth's surface is suitable for conventional agriculture, unconventional methods may be demanded.

Hydroponic farming, the growing of plants without soil, has been done in scientific laboratories for several hundred years. Now it is being tested commercially in the U.S., Canada, and two foreign countries.

Hydroponic farming can produce crops with as little as 129th the water used in conventional farming, according to Malcolm L. Lentz, president of Hydroculture, Inc., of Glendale, Ariz., a leader in the new "growing" industry. That's important because water supplies also are shrinking.

"We can grow food practically anywhere —on the desert, on mountains, atop buildings, even on Iceland's frozen surface," said Lentz.

Hydroculture, Inc., has developed two systems. One unit grows green feed for livestock in seven days through controlled environment chambers. Then there is the "magic garden" system, automated greenhouses for year-round growing of vegetables for human consumption. The commercial size measures 26 feet by 128 feet; the smaller ones for use in or around the house are 10 feet by 14 feet.

Shallow trenches are dug the length of the greenhouse and heavy vinyl sheeting developed by the Goodyear Company is laid in the trenches. Perforated irrigation pipes carrying a special nutrient solution are laid over the liner and buried in a 10-inch covering of inert washed gravel.

The vinyl holds the gravel and keeps the nutrient from being absorbed into the earth. Seedlings are planted in the gravel, and moisture sensors in the beds automatically activate pumps at the head of the beds. Nutrient water is pumped up and cut off automatically as need arises or disappears.

Air is sucked through a filter at one end of the greenhouse, and a furnace is mounted at the other end for winter operation. Every other day attendants pollinate the plants with a battery operated electric toothbrush.

Hydroculture presently is concentrating on tomatoes, according to Lentz. A greenhouse holds 1,110 plants, and the yield is roughly 30,000 pounds of "gourmet" tomatoes per year. Commercial production of cucumbers recently was begin, and experiments continue on other vegetables, fruits and flowers.

Tax Policy Erodes Job Outlook: BCMA

VANCOUVER (CP) — Proposed federal and provincial tax legislation will result in a serious erosion of the capability of mining and other basic industries to create jobs and revenue, the president of the British Columbia Mining Association said.

T. H. McClelland, also president of Placer Development Ltd., expressed the industry's discontent with apparent inconsistencies in government policy in an address to a luncheon marking the association's 50th anniversary.

"It is the stated policy of the federal and provincial governments to combat present and projected unemployment," he said.

"Without much ado various plans have been introduced including subsidies to various industries — but not mining — and to depressed areas and disadvantaged citizens.

At the same time, these governments introduce proposed new tax legislation which must inevitably result in a serious reduction and erosion of the job and revenue creating capability of mining and other basic industry."

He said the mining industry in B.C. is committed to a $500 million expenditure on new projects, most of them to be under way by 1972, which are expected to create by 1975 at least 14,000 new jobs in B.C. and 21,000 elsewhere in Canada. This is apart from construction jobs and is all from the private sector.

At present, directly and indirectly, the mining industry employs 42,000 in B.C. and 137,000 in Canada.

McClelland said a proposed amendment to the Yukon Quartz Mining Act will increase royalties as much as 300 per cent and put some operators in the position of paying combined income taxes and royalties of 65 per cent, if white paper federal tax abatements are not applied in the territories.

New Company Incorporations In Marked Gain

Incorporation of new B.C. companies took a decided upturn in February following minor improvement in January and a marked decline for the full 1970 period.

Taken as a barometer of economic buoyancy, company registrations confirm predictions that a new period of growth is due after the inflation-fighting recession felt most of last year.

There were 628 new incorporations in the province last month, 75 more than in the same month a year ago and 141 more than in January.

More extra-provincial companies (with original registration in other provinces and states) were recorded in February, a total of 45 compared with 39 in January and 45 a year ago.

There were 43 societies registered, up from 38 the year before and 34 in January.

Fewer partnerships and proprietorships were recorded—133 last month vs. 141 in January, and down from 205 in February 1970. Co-operatives remained constant at two each for last month and February a year ago.

In 1969 there were a total 7,414 new B.C.-based companies registered, a figure which declined in 1970 to 6,406.

Chemcell Buys Technology From Mohasco

MONTREAL — The Celanese carpet division of Chemcell Ltd. has announced the signing of a major agreement to purchase technology from Mohasco Industries, Inc., one of the largest carpet producers in the U.S.

The agreement, which became effective on January 1 of this year, gives the celanese carpet division virtually unlimited access to Mohasco's styling, product and process development and production know-how. Mohasco is a technological leader in the U.S. carpet industry, and also offers the industry's widest range of carpet types and styles in both residential and commerical fields.

Acquisition of Mohasco's know-how, for which the Chemcell division will pay fees and royalties, will enable the Canadian producer to enlarge and improve significantly the range of styles and specialized carpet types it manufactures and sells in this country. Since the division's carpet mill, located at Sorel, Quebec, is one of the most modern in Canada, Mohasco's manufacturing know-how can be readily adapted to the Canadian plant.

Canadian Pacific Investments Ltd. reports consolidated income before extraordinary items of $37.8 million for 1970, compared with $41 million in 1969.

Earnings per common share equalled 66 cents in 1970 vs. 72 cents.

A loss of $150,000-$200,000 is forecast by Bow Valley Industries Ltd. for the quarter ended Feb. 28, compared with a profit of $380,000 in the period a year ago.

Seasonal losses on operations were not offset by profits in the oil and gas drilling sector, which showed a decline from previous performance.

Shareholders of Bow Valley and Syracuse Oils Ltd. meet April 13 to approve amalgamation of the companies.

The prospect is one of several known anomalies on southern Vancouver Island most of which appear to have copper mineralization.

Western Mines reports it is testing feasibility of stacking its Buttle Lake tailings on land rather than pumping them into the lake, and also that published reports of government tests of metal content in lake water have been misinterpreted. Pollution is "well below maximum acceptable level," the company said.

In 1970 Western net earnings fell from just over $6 million to $3.9 million on revenue of $13.47 million, vs. $15.8 million a year ago. Per share earnings were 76 cents against $1.23.

Co-operation Aids Trade Regulation

By BUD JORGENSEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A spirit of co-operation seems to be developing between regulatory authorities overseeing Canadian securities trading but provincial opposition to federal involvement is unabated.

One indication was adoption this week at a national conference of securities administrators of a system to speed up approval of securities issued for sale on a national basis.

Another is the development of the Canadian Depository for Securities. Planning was begun in 1969 and it is scheduled to begin operation in August, 1972.

The depository will in simple terms be like a chequing account for dealers in large blocks of securities. It would provide for computerized registration and transfer of securities.

Supporters of development of the system include the stock exchanges in Montreal, Toronto and Vancouver, banks, mutual funds and brokerage houses.

PLAN TO ISSUE MANUAL

Later this month, the depository staff will issue the first edition of its operational manual. This will provide the basic format of the system and if approved by its supporters, the depository board of directors will be able to begin equipment selection and system design.

It now appears that the board, because of financial concerns, will have to begin making policy decisions before enabling legislation is passed by the provinces.

C. Ivor Murray, president of the company formed to develop the computerized operation, says the system as proposed will require departures from procedures not presently recognized by laws.

Mr. Murray said enabling legislation at the federal level is currently being drafted and he anticipates passage this spring. He does not expect the three key provinces—Quebec, Ontario and British Columbia—will approve corresponding legislation until late this year or early next year.

Federal officials have expressed an interest in development of a national securities market but there has been little enthusiastic response from provincial authorities.

NEED SOME SUPERVISION

When the plan for the depository was being developed, Mr. Murray said, provincial securities administrators told him "we are not going to have this used as an entree into federal supervision of securities trading."

The depository would perform what are primarily clerical duties for brokers, institutional investors and some large corporations with big investment portfolios. Broker-to-broker transactions account for about 35 per cent of the trading in stock on Canadian exchanges and institutions—banks, mutual funds, insurance companies—account for another major share.

"We must accept a certain amount of federal supervision," Mr. Murray said. One reason is because many institutional investors are federally chartered.

The federal department of insurance will be responsible for federal supervision but its powers will be limited to audit and inspection. Its principal recourse, if it objected to operations of the system, would be to force withdrawal of the federally chartered institutions.

Mr. Murray says the depository has so far had no opposition from provincial authorities and it is on the basis of this rapport that he believes they can proceed with advanced planning before enabling legislation is passed.

"If we are going to have a national securities commission," he says, "the push has to come from the financial community."

Tax Tips

Tax Tips, a daily feature in the Times, is prepared by the Victoria District Office, National Revenue, Taxation. For additional information on preparation of your income tax return, write to the Victoria office of National Revenue, Taxation.

Q. What shall I do if the social insurance number entered on either my tax form or my T4 slip is incorrect?

A. If the number is incorrect on your income tax form cross out the wrong number and enter the correct number. If your social insurance number is incorrect on your T4 slips notify your employer and ask him to make the necessary correction

Q. When my parents died I went to live with an aunt. I was not legally adopted by my aunt but she paid for my education. She is now quite elderly and I give her a small allowance. Am I allowed to claim her on my income tax form as a dependant.

A. If your aunt has an income of less than $950, you may claim her as a dependant, as if she were your mother.

Q. My husband and I both work and I have to employ a housekeeper to look after the children. When filing my income tax form can I claim the housekeeper as a deduction?

A. No. The housekeeper's salary is not deductible for income tax purposes either by you or your husband. However, you are entitled to deduct the contributions you make as an employer to the Canada Pension Plan on behalf of your housekeeper.

Q. I know I should have received a personalized income tax return because I have filed a return for the past two years. However, either I have not received it or I have lost it since it was delivered. What do I do now?

A. You should obtain a T1 form from either a Post Office or your District Taxation Office, and complete and file it as soon as possible. Be sure you obtain and file the proper form — T1 Short, for the majority of Canadians, or T1 General.

Q. I was transferred to another city in 1970 and we decided to rent our house rather than sell it. I understand I can deduct capital cost allowance from my rental income but what do I use for a capital cost figure? We lived in the house for years and, with the improvements we made, it's worth a lot more than we paid for it originally.

A. You are entitled to claim capital cost allowance on the amount you could have sold your house for when you started to rent it, minus the value of the land.

Q. I gave $50 to the United Appeal. Can I claim this as a tax deduction in addition to the standard deduction of $100?

A. No. You are entitled to claim either the standard deduction of $100 or your charitable donations and medical expenses, but not both in the same year.

Q. I am a fisherman and I have to get my wife to drive me to the various ports, to the boat. Can I claim any deductions for my car expenses? I am not the owner of the boat but a crew member.

A. No. The boat would be taken as your place of employment and if you were not picking up any supplies, or carrying out any transportation of other crew members at the request of the owner, your trips to and from the boat would be considered as personal, and you would not be able to make any claim on your income tax.

Rebel Island Calm As U.K. Troops Leave

ANGUILLA, West Indies (Reuter) — A projected gradual reduction of British police and military strength on Anguilla is a reflection of the calm now prevailing on this rebel island of 6,000 residents.

Anguillans are still determined to be independent of the parent government of the associated state of St. Kitts-Nevis-Anguilla from which they seceded in May, 1967, after it was created out of a former British colony.

But hostility which led two years later to the ejection of a British minister, who arrived on the island with proposals to end the secession, and the subsequent landing of British paratroops in March, 1969, has now largely dissipated.

For two years now the Anguillans, through an "illegal" island council, have been working harmoniously with a British commissioner. According to their leaders, they are happy and anxious that a British presence should remain at least for some years.

"Our intention is to keep Britain here until our political situation is resolved," Ronald Webster, chairman of the council, said in an interview here.

The Anguillans have had the help of the British commissioner and his staff, more than 150 royal engineers and about 70 metropolitan police from London. The paratroopers have long since gone home.

British foreign office official Joseph Godber said after talks on the island that the metropolitan police will gradually be replaced by local police after they have been trained. "We have no intention to maintain a military presence in Anguilla," he added.

The Anguillans, who rejected a recent British proposal that they rejoin the St. Kitts federation, say that St. Kitts—70 miles away—takes no interest in their well-being.

FRAZIER RATED SLIM CHOICE OVER ALI

GROSS TAKE COULD BE MORE THAN $20 MILLION

Undefeated Heavyweights to Decide Real Champion

NEW YORK (CP) — Shortly after 10:30 p.m. tonight (7:30 p.m. Victoria time) Muhammad Ali and Joe Frazier will touch gloves at mid-ring at Madison Square Garden here and square off for their long-anticipated showdown.

The battle between Frazier, the recognized heavyweight boxing champion of the world, and Ali, the defrocked champion, has generated more excitement than any fight since the second Joe Louis-Max Schmeling bout in 1938.

Some 300 million people around the world are expected to witness the fight on closed circuit television or on their home sets.

The Garden has been sold out for weeks to its 19,500 capacity for a record $1.25 million indoor gate. With closed-circuit television and satellite transmission to 35 countries, the gross take could swell above $20 million, a figure unheard of heretofore.

Adding to the lustre is the fact that never before in the history of boxing have two undefeated champions met for the sport's most honored prize.

It is the classic battle of the boxer, Ali, versus the slugger, Frazier. But it is more than that. It is an attempt by Ali to turn back the clock 3½ years with Frazier trying to prove that it cannot be done.

"He's a loud-mouth, he's a nut, he appeals to fools—I will beat him inside of 10 rounds," says Frazier.

"He's just a homemade champion, an amateur, ugly and awkward—it will be no contest, I will win," boasts Ali.

Frazier, 27, is rated a slight favorite to retain his championship, but odds that opened at 7 to 5 for the champion have been dropping.

The most realistic appraisal apparently is offered by Jimmy (The Greek) Snyder, the unofficial Wizard of Odds, who calls it an even "Pick 'em" fight.

The three-knockdown rule will be in effect for the fight. Under this rule a fighter who is knocked down three times in one round automatically loses the fight on a technical knockout.

The careers of both fighters are strikingly parallel in many respects. They first attracted attention by winning Olympic titles—Ali the light heavyweight crown in the 1960 Olympics in Rome, and Frazier the heavyweight title four years later in Tokyo.

Both started their professional careers with the backing of a syndicate of wealthy businessmen. Frazier's Philadelphia-based Cloverlay group is still with him but Ali's Louisville, Ky., group has long since departed and he now is managed by Herbert Mohammad, son of Black Muslim leader Elijah Muhammad.

As well, both fighters are unbeaten in their professional careers—Ali with 31 wins, 25 by knockouts, and Frazier with 26 victories—23 by KOs.

Ali has been downed only twice in his professional career and Frazier only three. Neither has been troubled with cuts and both have proven their ability to withstand hard punching.

The 29-year-old Ali, who changed his name from Cassius Clay after becoming a Black Muslim, had his title lifted 3½ years ago for refusing induction into the U.S. armed forces. He said his status as a Muslim minister made him exempt from service but the legal status of his claim still remains unresolved.

But Ali came out of retirement Oct. 26 to score a spectacular third-round technical knockout over Jerry Quarry in Atlanta, Ga., and then won a 15th-round TKO over rugged Oscar Bonavena Dec. 7.

Canadian-born Jack Kent Cooke put up $4.5 million of the original $5 million bankroll with Jerry Perenchio of Chartwell Artists, promoters of the fight.

Perenchio and Cooke have predicted a gross of $30 million.

Each of the fighters has been guaranteed $2.5 million, largest purse in the history of sports. The previous high payday for a fighter was $1,434,000 earned by Floyd Patterson in his second fight against Sonny Liston in 1963.

COME TO THE PARTY . . .

Appearing rather solemn for man who predicts he'll dispose of Muhammad Ali in tonight's battle for world heaveweight title, Joe Frazier aims thumb at poster advertising "victory party."

Gil Equals Record As Canucks Clipped

By The Canadian Press

Centre Mike Walton finally got into the act during the weekend as Boston Bruins continued their assault on the National Hockey League record book.

The 25-year-old centre, a problem player at the start of the season with Toronto Maple Leafs before joining the Bruins several weeks ago, scored his first goal as a Bruin in Boston's 4-1 win Sunday over St. Louis Blues.

In other games, Gilbert Perreault equalled the high standard for rookies with his 33rd and 34th goals in Buffalo Sabres' 6-3 victory over Vancouver Canucks. Ted Irvine's three third-period goals sparked New York Rangers' 4-2 decision over Los Angeles Kings, Minnesota North Stars trimmed Philadelphia Flyers 3-1, Montreal Canadiens took Detroit Red Wings 4-1 and Pittsburgh Penguins rallied for a 3-3 tie with California Golden Seals.

Saturday Montreal hammered Los Angeles 8-2, Chicago Black Hawks and Toronto tied 2-2, New York and Detroit skated to a 2-2 deadlock, Boston downed Pittsburgh Penguins 6-3, Minnesota defeated Vancouver 3-1 and California and Philadelphia tied 4-4.

Vancouver plays at Montreal and St. Louis entertains Los Angeles in Tuesday night games.

Walton, who quit the Leafs early in December and didn't play another game until he donned a Bruin uniform in February, has been used sparingly as Boston's prolific scoring machine continues to shatter almost every single-season scoring mark in the record book.

His goal Sunday night, the first as a Bruin, tied the score while two team-mates closed to within one goal each of establishing single-season goal marks of their own.

Bruins Continue Record Assault

Bobby Orr followed Walton with his 32nd, one away from the mark he set for defencemen last year, and Phil Esposito's 57th is just one back of the record 58 by Chicago's Bobby Hull during the 1968-69 schedule.

The win extended Boston's unbeaten string on home ice to 25 games, three short of the record set by Montreal in 1943-44.

The Bruin win Saturday, highlighted by Esposito's record sixth three-goal game of the season, was their 47th and broke the former mark for season wins set by Montreal two years ago.

And the line of Esposito, Ken Hodge and Wayne Cashman established a new goal-scoring mark for linemates with Hodge's third-period score the 115th, surpassing the 114 by Detroit's Gordie Howe, Alex Delvecchio and Frank Mahovlich in 1968-69.

The Bruin victory Sunday gave them 103 points, equalling the high set by Montreal in 1968-69.

The 34 goals by Perreault, 20-year-old Sabres' centre, ties the record for rookies set by Nels Stewart of the old Montreal Maroons in 1925-26 and equalled in 1968-69 by Danny Grant of Minnesota and Norm Ferguson of California.

His first of the night snapped a 2-2 tie in the second period and his second insured the win after Larry Keenan had sent Buffalo into a 4-3 lead.

Breakaway goals by Eddie Joyal and Gilles Marotte in the second period at New York gave the Kings a 2-1 edge and set the stage for Irvine's heroics as the Rangers extended their unbeaten string to eight games.

Ex-Red Wing Frank Mahovlich scored twice against his former team-mates in Detroit as the Canadiens continued a late-season surge during which they have lost once in 12 games.

Goals by Andy Bathgate, Syl Apps and Wally Boyer during a span of four minutes in the third period pulled Pittsburgh into their home-ice tie with California.

The Penguins received disappointing news during the weekend. Rookie Greg Polis will be out for the remainder of the season with throat trouble and flu.

Frazier Target Of Threat

NEW YORK (CP) — Tightened security measures following a bomb scare and a reported threat on Joe Frazier's life added to the tension building up for tonight's heavyweight title fight between Frazier and Muhammad Ali.

Eight detectives were said to be guarding Frazier and his manager, Yancey Durham, after the boxing champion was reported to have received a letter and later an anonymous telephone call threatening his life if he did not throw the fight.

Another report circulated Sunday that a downtown hotel, Frazier's normal New York City headquarters, had received a bomb threat. The same source in Frazier's camp who reported the threatening phone call said the bomb scare was checked and no bomb was found.

Five hundred special police have been assigned to Madison Square Garden, where, shortly after 10:30 p.m. EST, Ali and Frazier will touch gloves at mid-ring to square off for their long-anticipated showdown.

Frazier weighed in at 205½ pounds while Ali tipped the scales at 215 pounds.

The fighters were weighed an hour apart on orders from Edwin Dooley, chairman of the New York State Athletic Commission who termed Ali a "provocateur."

Ali has a history of causing commotion at weigh-ins.

. . . I'LL BE THE KING

Joe may be planning victory party but Ali dons crown and leaves little doubt as to who he believes will be winner when punching ends tonight at New York's Madison Square Garden. (AP Wirephoto.)

J. C. Snead Had Answer For Boor in Bleachers

MIAMI (AP) — Straw-hatted Sam Snead has long been known as the Jack Benny of pro golf, a drawling miser who stuffed his millions into tomato cans and buried them.

That was yesteryear.

Nephew Jesse Carlyle Snead shot a 69 Sunday to win the Doral-Eastern Open's top prize of $30,000. Two weeks earlier, he took the Tucson Open and $22,000.

"Uncle Sam really isn't cheap," said Suzie Snead, wife of the golf tour's newest hero.

"People used to order drinks and Sam got stuck with the cheque. He just got smart, that's all."

The elder Snead, still swinging at age 58, was packed and gone when nephew Carlyle marched home a winner in the $150,000 tournament.

Carlyle, one-time $500-a-month minor league baseball player, had rounds of 70-70-66-69, a 13-under-par 275.

Veteran Gardner Dickinson rolled in a seven-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole to finish at 276.

As Snead lined up his approach to the final green, a clown in the bleachers yelled, "Miss it."

Carlyle said: "I'm shooting for $30,000 and some guy is yelling for me to miss it. It made me hot and I said to myself, 'I'm gonna show you.' "

He did.

Dickinson was two shots ahead of Miller Barber, who charged with a four-under-par 68 and a 278 total. Barber's $10,650 cheque made him 1971's top money man with more than $79,000.

Gibby Gilbert finished fourth at 279 and young Bruce Fleisher tied at 280 with Bruce Devlin and Terry Dill.

Defending champion Mike Hill finished strongly with a 68 for 281 and PGA champ Jack Nicklaus, whose charge never came off, settled for a closing 73 for 282. Nicklaus tied for ninth with Homero Blancas.

George Knudson was top Canadian with 290, worth $360. The Toronto touring pro, originally credited with an opening-round 69 Thursday and a second-place tie, had his Thursday score changed Sunday to a 75. No reason was given for the change.

Ken Fulton of Montreal, the only other Canadian to survive the cut after Friday's 18 holes, finished at 291 to earn $231.

VANCOUVER — Bob Puddicombe of the Vancouver Lawn Tennis Club won the men's singles crown at the B.C. Indoor tennis championships at his home court Sunday, defeating Don McCormick of Victoria 1-6, 6-4, 7-6 in the final.

McCormick and Tony Bardsley defeated Mike Prineas and Don Gerstmar of Seattle 7-6, 7-6, for the doubles title.

Susan Butt of Vancouver's Jericho club won the women's crown defeating Mary Delay of Seattle, 6-3, 6-1.

Lansdowne Wins Title In Thriller

GANGES — Lansdowne of Victoria nipped Campbell River 31-30 Saturday in a thrilling battle for the Vancouver Island junior high school girls' basketball championship.

It was the third successive year that the two teams have met in the final of the Island tournament and it was the first victory for Lansdowne, which held a 15-14 lead at half-time of the down-to-the-wire struggle.

Leslie Godfrey pumped in 19 points to lead the Lansdowne attack while Sue Rollins paced Campbell River with 11.

Oak Bay bounced Reynolds 32-16 to collect third place while Woodlands of Nanaimo finished fourth with a 36-24 win over Dunsmuir. Reynolds was fifth and Dunsmuir sixth.

Jill Smith and Leslie Godfrey of Lansdowne were selected to the tournament all-star team, which also included Margaret Hanna and Miss Rollins of Campbell River and Margaret Mainwaring of Oak Bay.

Acadia's Defence Throttles Bisons

WOLFVILLE, N.S. (CP) — Acadia Axemen won the 1971 Canadian inter-collegiate basketball championship Saturday with a 72-48 win over University of Manitoba Bisons.

Acadia's defence was the whole story. The Axemen held the Bisons to five field goals in the first half with a variety of defences while taking advantage of numerous Manitoba turnovers and walked off the floor at half-time, leading 30-15.

Colquitz Enjoys Taste of Revenge

Colquitz retained the Vancouver Island junior high school boys' basketball championship Saturday by defeating Oak Bay 63-23 in the final of the two-day tournament at Lansdowne Junior High.

And Colquitz gained a little additional revenge prior to the final by downing southern-zone champion Lansdowne, 58-47. Lansdowne won the southern zone title last weekend while Oak Bay finished second and Colquitz placed third.

In the battle for third and fifth spots in the eight-team tourney, Lansdowne defeated northern-zone champion Campbell River, 59-31.

Woodlands of Nanaimo captured fourth place with a 59-53 win over E. J. Dunn of Port Alberni.

Oak Bay gained the final by downing Campbell River 38-36 while Woodlands nipped Mt. Prevost of Duncan 46-44 and E. J. Dunn tripped Royal Oak 59-37 in earlier Saturday games.

Denis Daviault led Colquitz in the final with 20 points while Gary Budd and Bruce Lubinich added 10 points each. John Burrows paced Oak Bay with 12 points.

Lansdowne was named the most sportsmanlike team in a vote by tournament referees.

Schoolgirl Title

VANCOUVER (CP) — Alberta won the Canadian schoolgirl curling championships in Vancouver Sunday in a sudden-death final game that saw them defeat British Columbia 8-6.

Prince George Wins 'B' Crown

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prince George won the provincial senior "B" women's basketball championship Saturday with a 57-40 victory over Vancouver Rovers.

Elaine Stewart was high point scorer with 22 points for Prince George.

Moncton's Skip Unhappy Winner

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP) — Ed Steeves chided himself Sunday night after his New Brunswick rink squeezed by Alberta 10-9 in opening-round play in the Canadian mixed curling championship.

Dissatisfied with his performance in the ninth end of the extra-end match, the Moncton skip said of the ninth end:

"If I hadn't been so stupid we would have had five.

"The shot just hung up there."

Down 9-5 in the end, Steeves had four rocks in the house with Alberta lying shot. He got only a piece of the shot rock with his takeout attempt and managed to push it to the side of the house. It left him with three in the end and he had to steal a single in the 10th to tie the match and force it to an extra end.

The host quartet stole another single in the extra frame to defeat the Bruce Stewart Prairie rink and remain one of five rinks undefeated after opening day play.

Jim Donstone's Manitoba rink, Bill Tracy's Quebec foursome, Nick Oldale's Nova Scotia unit and the Horst Illing-skipped Newfoundland rink all had wins for a 1-0 record.

The Larry McGrath rink of Saskatchewan drew the bye.

In other first-round matches, Newfoundland edged Ontario 6-5 with an extra-end, Nova Scotia dumped British Columbia 7-5, Quebec defeated Northern Ontario 7-4 and Manitoba whipped Prince Edward Island 10-5.

The tournament continues with two rounds today.

JEROME, FORMER SKI QUEEN . . . . . RATED BEST ATHLETES

Dominoes Team of Century

VANCOUVER — Victoria Dominoes, who charged to the 1946 Canadian senior men's basketball championship without losing a league or playoff game, were named the British Columbia "team of the century" Saturday by the B.C. Sport Federation.

Dominoes won three national crowns after the same squad had captured two Canadian titles while operating under the name of Blue Ribbons, but the award was made to the 1945-46 team, generally considered the greatest of all Canadian amateur hoop clubs.

Chuck Chapman, who shared in all the national championships, received a trophy presented to the team. The trophy was taken to Victoria but team members plan to offer it for display in the B.C. Sport Hall of Fame at Vancouver.

Members of the 1945-46 club were George Andrews, Norm Baker, Chuck and Art Chapman, Stan "Busher" Jackson, the late Ian McKeachie, Doug Peden, Hank Rowe, George Straigth and Alan Wright.

Wright and Art Chapman now reside in Vancouver.

Nancy Greene Raine, former world ski queen, was named the province's female athlete of the century and sprinter Harry Jerome, former co-holder of world 100-metre and 100-yard records, was selected as the best male athlete.

Also announced Saturday were awards for performances in the past year.

High-jumper Debbie Brill, 17, of Haney was rated the B.C. senior athlete-of-the-year; Vancouver's versatile Ken Olynyk was named the top high school performer, water-ski ace George Athans, 18, of Kelowna was rated university athlete of the year and the province's best overall contestant, and Vancouver Calonas, national women's volleyball champions, were selected as the leading team.

Swimmer Donna Marie Gurr of Vancouver was picked as the best junior athlete and a special award was made to figure-skater Karen Magnussen of North Vancouver, who recovered from leg fractures to win the Canadian championship this year.

Jessie Kinneard of Esquimalt won the second event by scoring a 9-8, extra-end victory over Vancouver's Maj. Doan rink, skipped by Erie Cunningham.

Duguid Retains National Crown

QUEBEC (CP) — Don Duguid flies to Megeve, France, Friday to defend the world curling championship he won at Utica, N.Y., last year.

But between now and then, he will probably give considerable thought to one of the strangest weeks he has spent at the game since he became a competitive curler almost 20 years ago.

Duguid, lead Woody Wood, second Jim Pettapiece and third Rod Hunter, all from Winnipeg's Granite Club, won the Canadian curling championship for the second-straight year Saturday.

They did it by defeating Bill Tetley, the Northern Ontario representative from Thunder Bay,11-6 in the second game of a three-rink, two-game playoff Saturday—the first three-way playoff for the Macdonald's Brier trophy since 1962.

The victory by Duguid marked the 18th time Manitoba representatives have won the trophy since 1927. By the same token, Dougaid's victory was only the sixth time the same skip had won the national title two years running.

TETLEY LED

For awhile it appeared Tetley would go all the way to give Northern Ontario its first championship since 1960.

He led 2-0 after three ends as he counted singles in the first and third. But Duguid came back with two in the fourth end to tie the game.

The Manitoba skip went ahead 3-2 in the fifth when he stole the end, only to have Northern Ontario count two in the sixth. But Duguid then broke the game wide open with a three-ender in the seventh.

"That was the turning point," Duguid said, referring to his seventh-end three-count. "Once you're ahead, it's not too hard to hit the other rocks, but once you're behind, its hard to bury them."

Duguid, a 25-year-old assistant marketing manager, was one of several skips who complained about the stones used during the championship.

"The way the rocks were acting, it was hard to make them work properly," Duguid said.

Saskatchewan's Bob Pickering from Avonlea, whose rink was third in the three-way playoff and who was dropped when he lost the morning semi-final by a 10-9 decision to Tetley, was more specific.

TESTED STONES

After he was eliminated, Pickering had some stones brought in from a local club to test against the rocks being used in the championship.

After the test, Pickering said there was a tremendous difference between the club stones and the reconditioned ones he and the other skips had been complaining about all week.

"There was a difference like day and night between the rocks," Pickering said. "The club rocks pulled normally on this ice. The Brier rocks went down the ice like a snake."

Earlier in the competition, Pickering and Kevin Smale of British Columbia's Prince George rink, complained that the ice was unsatisfactory and stones were reacting in a strange fashion. However, a curling official said Wednesday the claim of poor ice conditions was not valid, and that more than likely the reconditioned stones were causing the snaking movements from hack to house.

SCOTT MUNRO

Cougars Fly Well When Wings Break

By ERNIE FEDORUK

Victoria wingers Bruce Cowick and Scott Munro went on the firing line Saturday to spark Cougars' 5-1 victory over Penticton Broncos and help coach Mike Shabaga stock-pile verbal ammunition for the British Columbia Junior Hockey League playoffs.

With first place in the Coastal Division confirmed Friday, the play of Cowick and Munro was the most important happening as the Cougars continue to tie up the loose ends around the regular season.

Each could have had three goals. Munro settled for two — his 31st and 32nd — while Cowick accounted for his 24th and two helpers.

Each missed on other chances, clear-cut breakaways, but Shabaga settled for the ammunition they provided.

As a team, the Cougars delighted the 3,436 fans — the season's largest at Memorial Arena this season — with a solid effort against Penticton. Shabaga enjoyed it, too, but with one reservation.

He doesn't think the Cougars "head-man" the puck — relay it to players ahead of the play — as they should.

Failure to head-man the puck led to occasional difficulties in their own zone and, further up the ice, nullified what might have been good scoring breaks.

Both Cowick and Munro showed off the best results of proper passing. They enjoyed their exciting solo runs at the Penticton goal when given the puck quickly while leading the play.

"It's the best way to travel," noted Mr. Shabaga. "The odds are against you if you try to lug the puck from one end of the rink to the other, but some of my guys insist on doing it."

Hotel Douglas roared away to a 50-35 half-time lead Sunday and then held on for a 78-73 victory over Port Alberni in the opening game of a two-game, total-point series for the Vancouver Island senior "B" men's basketball championship.

Larry Lehtonen led Port Alberni with 19 points before fouling out early in the second half. John Drew added 16 points to Alberni's total.

Second game of the series will be played at 2 p.m. next Sunday in Port Alberni with the winner advancing to the provincial championship in Vancouver later this month.

Cubs Lace Bucks In Series Finale

NANAIMO — Victoria Cubs pointed Nanaimo Buckaneers 11 2 Saturday night in the deciding game of a best-of-five series for the Vancouver Island junior "B" hockey championship.

Cubs, who won all three games on opposition ice, now advance to the B.C. playoffs and meet a Lower Island finalist Saturday at Victoria's Memorial Arena.

A brawl among the players of both teams forced officials to stop the game at 16:50 of the third period before a crowd of 1,856 fans.

Cubs led 5-1 after the second period after the teams went scoreless through the first 20 minutes.

Ron Poole scored three goals to pace Cubs while Mark Purdy and Don Blyth added two apiece. Randy Vanyo, Jim Wilkinson, Gord Neilson and Jerry Caldwell supplied Victoria's singles.

Lindsay Thompson and Lindsay Valliere scored for Nanaimo.

Thorne Boys Shine In Distance Races

Charlie Thorne of the University of Victoria "A" squad covered the five and one-half mile course in a record 28 minutes, 37 seconds Saturday to win the men's open event in the fourth annual Central Saanich cross-country run.

Thorne was followed by a pair of former winners — Larry Corbett (28:48) of Uvic and Ken Weicker of Victoria Evergreens.

Wally Thorne and John Powell completed the Uvic squad which captured first place while Royal Roads Military College placed second.

Mount Douglas High School won the under-18 boys' event with Jim Thorne winning overall with a clocking of 29:24. Others on the winning team were Ian de Lisle, Alan de Lisle and Bob Logie. Brentwood College finished in the runner-up slot.

Victoria "Y" (Ernie Carson, Fraser Syme, David Martin, Brent Taylor) won the under-16 boys' team event while George Bonner from Mill Bay placed second. Richard Kirkham of Evergreens placed first individually with a time of 30 minutes.

Victoria "Y" and Arbutus Junior High School tied for first place in the under-14 section while Tom Griffin of Arbutus placed first. Another Arbutus harrier, Tony Ellwell, placed second.

Kathy Bertoia of Arbutus won the two and one-half mile event for girls 14 years of age and over. Victoria "Y's" team of Anne Kelly, Anne Chatwin, Debbie Smith and Debbie Knowles place first overall.

Richmond Elementary School (Ulla Nansen, Susan Hutchinson, Mary Cavin, Elizabeth Street) captured the girls' under-14 event while Mount Newton Junior High placed second.

Cats Move Ahead In Goalers' Race

So the benefits of "headmanning" as properly finished off by Cowick and Munro on Saturday will be some of the potshots fired at the Cougars in practices this week as Shabaga strives for team polish before the playoffs, two weeks hence.

Otherwise, the Cougars boosted individual records. Ted Plowe scored his 55th goal and 50th assist, and Rob Little contributed his 26th scoring shot of the year.

The four-goal spread of victory also enabled the Cougars netminding duo of Ed Forslund and Darryl Fedorak to move ahead of Penticton's Dave McLelland in the goaltending department.

It was Forslund's turn to work Saturday and he came up with several good stops to hold Penticton to one goal — that by scoring ace Vic Mercredi.

Ironically, Mercredi's goal welcomed Victoria defenceman Dale Pennock back into action. Dressed, Pennock didn't get on the ice until Bob Mayer limped off suddenly early in the second period.

Pennock jumped on for his first taste of action since suffering an ankle injury. Dale committed a glaring sin by leaving his position to run into Bruce Affleck, who was tied up along the boards by Cougar mate Pat Askew.

That left the brilliant Mercredi unmarked, and he scored easily to deprive Forslund of a shutout.

Despite claiming two points, Plowe lost considerable ground to Vernon's Jim Lawrence in the individual scoring race. Lawrence moved nine points ahead of the Cougar with a goal and four assists as Vernon downed Chilliwack Bruins 9-4 Saturday.

Lawrence's linemate Ed Johnstone scored four goals while the third member of the line, Wayne Dye, counted once and drew three assists.

McLelland's goals-against average was riddled again Sunday as Vancouver Centennials scored an 8-7 victory over Penticton, handing the Broncos their third straight setback.

In Sunday's other game, Kamloops Rockets skated to a 3-1 victory over Chilliwack.

Tigers Continue In Top-Spot Tie With Orangemen

Orangemen and Tigers remained in a deadlock for first place in the Vancouver Island Men's Field Hockey League on Sunday by battling to a 1-1 draw at Pemberton Park.

In the only other match played, Uvic downed Oak Bay Fossils 1-0 at Windsor Park. Rebels collected an easy victory by default over Red Barons.

Bobby Raine scored for Orangemen while Jagir Dhanowa balanced the count for Tigers.

Mariners Collect One-Goal Victory

Mariners defeated Oak Bay 2-1 and Uvic "A" downed Sandpipers 1-0 Saturday in first-division action of the Vancouver Island Women's Field Hockey League.

Jenny John and Vivian Davies counted goals for Mariners while Ann Shaw averted a shutout for Oak Bay.

In second-division play the same day, Uvic "B" trounced Esquimalt, 9-1 as Pat Ball scored four goals and Odette Graas added two tallies.

Outburst by Walsh Paces Castaways

Mike Walsh supplied nearly half the points while sparking Castaways to a 41-6 romp over Cowichan in a Victoria Rugby Union first division match Sunday at Brentwood College.

Walsh scored a try, booted a penalty goal and kicked seven converts for a total of 20 points.

In the only other first-division match of the weekend, James Bay Athletic Association tripped Oak Bay Wanderers 9-6 Saturday at Macdonald Park.

Oak Bay Wanderers bounced Castaways 32-5, JBAA defeated Uvic Saxons 18-3 and Saanich Velox won by default over CFB Esquimalt in second-division matches Saturday.

In other matches at Macdonald Park on Sunday, Mainland Juniors tripped Island Juniors 8-6 in the final encounter of a three-match trial series and Mainland Colts downed the Greater Victoria All-Star side which will be touring Great Britain at Easter, 11-5.

The trial series will be used to select a provincial representative side to meet a touring Japanese XV later this month in Vancouver.

Knott Ties Up England's Win

AUCKLAND (Reuter) — England salvaged a draw in the second cricket test against New Zealand at Eden Park here today and leave for home having scored a 1-0 triumph in the two-match series.

The New Zealanders, well placed at today's resumption to score their first win over England, saw their hopes crushed by Alan Knott who went close to his second century of the match before being dismissed for 96.

England, eight runs ahead on first innings, was 78 for four overnight, but Knott helped her to a second-innings total of 237 to set New Zealand an impossible victory target of 246 runs.

When bad light ended play 20 minutes early, New Zealand had made 40 without loss.

Knott's batting today was in complete contrast to his innings Friday, when he needed only 170 minutes to reach his century.

Scores: England 321 and 237; New Zealand 313 for seven and 40 for no wicket.

United Shuts Out School All-Stars

All-Stars, who leave next month on a tour of Great Britain, lost the first match between the two sides, 5-1.

Jan Bentley (2) and Gil McIlreath scored in the second half for United after the senior team was held to a lone goal by Ron Thompson in the opening half.

Esquimalt Skaters Take Team Crown

Bill Pickering won a duel with Allan Overend, his clubmate from Vancouver's Haida Club, to win the senior men's class title in the annual British Columbia indoor speedskating championships, but he had to share the spotlight with Marion Wiles and Stuart Ostlund.

Competing in the intermediate women's division of the annual meet at Esquimalt Sports Centre, Marion cracked a North American record for international indoor meets when she won the 800-metre event in one minute, 33 seconds, snapping the former mark of 1:43.3, set in New York. The Fort St. John star dominated her events to breeze to the intermediate women's aggregate crown while Ostlund, a Haida skater, was romping to the junior men's championship and adding a triumph in a men's open contest over 3,000 metres.

SMITH TOPS CLASS

With North American speedskaters switching from yards to metric distances this season, several indoor marks were chalked up during the meet. Two of them were established by Don Smith of the Esquimalt Speedskating Club on his way to the intermediate men's class crown. Esquimalt's Jimmy Michaels set one of the new marks in the bantam boys' 300-metre contest.

Coached by former Canadian champion Jim Shields, Esquimalt skaters Stewart Kennedy (bantam), Jim Entzminger (juvenile), Kim Cammiade (junior) and Doug Sneddon (intermediate) won aggregate titles in novice sections.

CLOSE BATTLE

Pickering battled with Overend through four events before taking the senior Men's class title. Both won two events but Pickering was credited with two runner-up finishes while Overend chalked up one second.

Division leaders from Fort St. John were Carol Ljuden (peewee girls), Tommy Ljuden (peewee boys), Marie Hughes (bantam girls) Forrest Lavik (bantam boys) and Gordie Bodnar (juvenile boys).

Class winners from Dawson Creek were Jane Swanson (midget girls), Darrock Aylward (midget boys) and Kirstine Henriksen (junior women).

Esquimalt took the team championship and was followed, in order by Dawson Creek, Fort St. John and Haida.

Rugged Viking Defence Shackles Mighty Birds

Courageous defending derailed the Birds and University of Victoria Vikings are riding a downhill track toward their second successive Pacific Northwest Intercollegiate Rugby Conference championship.

Vikings overcame the odds, elements and a parade of second-half perils to upset the vaunted University of British Columbia Thunderbirds 6-3 Saturday and now the Western Washington University side is the lone obstacle remaining in the way of a Uvic charge to the title.

They will be expected to overpower Western Washington in the final match on their league schedule, but the Vikings were far from favorites Saturday at wind-blasted Centennial Sadium.

Although they were undefeated in conference play, the Victorians had dropped an early-season exhibition clash to the UBC squad and the mighty Birds were riding the crest of a 15-game victory streak.

To make matters worse for the Vikings, they were without the services of star forward Mike Eckhart and swift three-quarter Dave Leonard, sidelined by a knee injury after scoring three trys the previous weekend in a 24-17 triumph over University of Washington.

BIRDS SCORE FIRST

Troubles appeared early for the Vikings, who appeared to squander some of the advantage of blustery breezes at their backs in the first half as they persisted with an attacking pattern of high kicks that did not produce the desired results.

Stand-off Ray Banks kicked a penalty goal after only three minutes and the Birds were off and running with a 3-0 lead.

That was the signal for the Uvic forwards to take charge and the Thunderbirds, noted for the scoring power of their backfield, didn't manage another score.

HARDY KICKS PAIR

Two penalty goals by stand-off Ted Hardy sent the Vikings into a 6-3 lead before the intermission, but many in the crowd of about 500 fans believed the margin would vanish after the Birds went to work in the second half with the wind behind them.

That the visitors didn't prevail during a succession of dangerous raids during the second session was a tribute to superb and determined defending by the Vikings, who were also aided by a few strokes of good fortune.

The final five minutes were torture for the hard-pressed Vikings, who twice came close to losing their advantage when Banks was slightly wide on a pair of penalty attempts.

Thunderbirds forced a scrum two yards from the Viking line in the dying seconds, but saw their last chance vanish on a clearance by Uvic fullback Jim Wenman.

NORSEMEN TRIUMPH

Victoria also came out on top in a preliminary match as the Norsemen scored all their points with the wind in the first half and downed UBC's second side 17-9.

Norsemen got their points on three penalty goals and a conversion by Doug Pettman and trys by Mark Hoffman and Frank Carson. The UBC seconds counted on a first-half try by John Smith and Tony Hugman's second-half kicking that produced a penalty goal and a drop goal.

Varsity lineups:

Vikings — Jim Wenman; Reg Hoole, Paul Carnes, Gerry Johnson, Dave Hutchings; Ted Hardy, Dave Slater; Kenny Kemp, Derek Reimer; Gaither Zinkan; Lee Donney, Mitchael O'Connor; Stu Bailey, Ken Wilkie, Bob Beck.

Degiosbrand Rink Takes Top Event

Jerry Degiosbrand skipped his entry to victory in the "A" event of the annual two-day White Ensign mixed curling bonspiel which ended Sunday at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Ken Wark, Karin Brane and Pat Elander rounded out the winning foursome.

Cy Mann (Bud Bondeson, Tina Mann, Rose Ellis) captured the "B" event; Tim Horrigan (Jim Fennell, Mrs. Fennell, Mandy Connors) won "C" event laurels and Ted Eveleigh (Al Stearn, Joan Stearn, Del Wark) nailed down the "D" event award.

THE LAST WORD

Julia's Very Own 'Pain Francais'

By Jack Scott

We will now close forever the entire subject of French bread with the final, definitive word on the subject by the one and only Julia Child. Readers who are not interested in making this bread, which takes, at the very least, seven full hours, are kindly asked to tip-toe away and leave us fanatics to our madness. Bye-bye, all.

The magnificent Julia will be seen this coming Wednesday night at eight o'clock on Channel Nine, in her role as The French Chef, giving the second of a two-part demonstration of how French bread is made. You'd be a fool to miss it.

The copyright recipe she has sent me from Boston is for the classic, long loaf, Pain Francais, and will make three loaves 16 to 18 inches long and three inches in diameter. Don't be alarmed about the seven-hour schedule. Most of that time is taken up in the three risings that are required. The mixing and kneading should take less than a half hour.

Now, here we go:

Temperature and timing notes: Pick cool, dry days for your first French bread experiments. In order that the dough may develop its characteristic French bread taste and texture, it must triple in volume for each of its three rises. Ideal room temperature for rising is between 70 and 75 degrees. If temperature is lower, the dough will simply take longer to rise.

Scott

For the dough: One package dry-active yeast; one-third cup warm water (100-105) degrees; three and one-half cups (one pound) all-purpose flour, preferably unbleached (measure by dipping dry-measure cups into flour and sweeping off excess); a fairly vertical-sided three to four quart mixing bowl; two-and-one-quarter teaspoons of salt; one and a quarter cups tepid water; a rubber spatula.

Kneading: A wooden or plastic working surface about two feet square; a pastry scraper or stiff spatula.

Final rising of formed loaves: A canvas pastry cloth, available in any household department, or a heavy linen towel; a large baking sheet or tray, 20 by 24 inches.

Baking; About one-half cup corn meal; an unmolding board — a stiff piece of cardboard, a shingle, a piece of plywood, or a baking sheet wrapped in a floured towel—18 inches long and at least four inches wide; your largest baking sheet; a fine-mist spray of some sort, filled with cold water, or a soft brush and cup of cold water.

The dough mixture: Stir the yeast into the one-third cup of water and let dissolve; measure the flour into the mixing bowl, add the salt and the rest of the water. Then stir yeast with spatula until granules have dissolved completely, pour into bowl, and mix vigorously with spatula. Turn out onto working surface and let rest three to four minutes. Meanwhile, wash out bowl, pour in ten and one-half cups tepid water and mark level outside to guide you later when the dough rises. Drain and dry the bowl.

Kneading: Dough should be quite soft and sticky. Start kneading by flipping one side over onto the other with scraper or spatula; continue this movement rapidly for a number of seconds, until dough begins to have enough body so that you can push it with the heel of your hand after flipping. Finally, sweep dough off work surface with scraper and throw it roughly back; flip it over, sweep it up, slap it down and continue, thus, vigorously, until dough feels free of lumps and draws back when pushed out. Let rest again for two minutes. Knead again for a minute or two. Dough should be soft, smooth, elastic and pliable. Scoop into clean bowl and cover airtight with plastic wrap. (You now have approximately three cups of dough; kneading time is eight to 10 minutes.)

First and second risings in bowl: Let rise at a room temperature of between 70 and 75 degrees until dough reaches the ten and one-half cup level marked on the bowl—three to five hours. Lightly flour working surface, and scoop dough onto it. Flatten (patting with the lightly-floured palms of your hands) into a 10 to 12-inch circle. Flip near side over onto far side, then left side onto right, and finally flip near side completely over and just under far side. Clean out bowl, lift dough back into it, cover, and let rise again almost to the previous level—one and a half to two and a half hours, at 70 to 75 degrees.

Forming long loaves and final rise: Scoop dough out onto lightly-floured surface and cut cleanly into three pieces. Flip near edge of each over onto far edge and let rest four to five minutes. One at a time, flatten with lightly-floured palms of hands, patting it left and right into an oval eight or more inches long. Flip near side almost up to far side; flatten again. Always lightly dusting work surface with flour, flip far side almost down over near side. Flatten again. Then, with the heel or the side of your hand, press a trench lengthwise across centre of dough and fold in two by flipping far side down to cover near side. Seal the two edges with the heel of your hand. You now have a fat sausage shape; lengthen it to fit the length of your baking sheet as follows: Place your hands together, palms down, on the centre of the sausage shape; rotate it back and forth under your palms as you slide your hands toward its two ends. Keeping the circumference as even as possible, repeat the movement several times as you roll the dough into as long a sausage as you wish. Rub flour into surface of pastry cloth, and place dough sealed side up (if you can still find the seal) at one side of cloth. Pinch a ridge in cloth to make a trough and room for next piece of dough. Form the other pieces, and lay on the cloth. Cover loosely with a floured towel and let rise to almost triple at 70 to 75 degrees; dough should look puffed and swollen. Time: one and a half to two and a half hours.

Baking: Pre-heat oven to 450 degrees. Sprinkle cornmeal over surface of baking sheet and along edge of unmolding board. One at a time, flip formed dough from canvas to unmolding board and arrange on baking sheet, soft underside of dough on top. Immediately make three lengthwise slashes in the top of the dough with a razor, cutting almost parallel to surface, as follows: first, from one end down a third of the length, just left of centre; second, from upper to lower third, at a slight angle from right to left; third, from lower third to end of loaf, just right of centre. At once, spray surface of loaves with a light film of water and set in lowest level of oven. At minute two, rapidly spray surface again; at minute four, spray again. At minute six, set in upper middle level, and spray a final time. Bake 20 to 25 minutes in all, until loaves are crusty and sound hollow when thumped. Turn off oven and leave five to 10 minutes longer to dry out interior, then remove and stand upright to let air circulate freely around the bread as it cools.

"THEY'RE TRYING TO SMOKE US OUT," says Pat Codyre, who awoke today to the sound of bulldozers piling brush near his home at 1890 Munn Road. Codyre has refused to move from the house since it was expropriated last August by B.C. Hydro, who want to build a Jordan River-Victoria transmission line through the property. Codyre said he and his wife have been without water since a pipe leading to the house was accidentally broken Friday. A pipe leading to the septic tank overflow also was broken. "I'm not blaming the cat drivers," says Codyre. "They're just working men." (Bill Halkett photo.)

Man, 43, Victim Of Inlet

A View Royal man, Bruce Allen, 43, of 109 Burnett, is missing and presumed drowned after his 15-foot runabout was found drifting in Saanich Inlet near McCurdy Point Sunday morning.

Allen, district insulations officer for the B.C. Telephone Co., left Brentwood at 6 a.m. to go fishing.

His boat was spotted about 100 yards offshore, a fishing line still dangling from her stern, about 11 a.m. by Bob Redgrave, 1255 Judge Place, and Barry Jenner, who were returning from a fishing trip in Redgrave's 26-foot cabin cruiser Lazy Gal.

Redgrave said they stopped to investigate when they saw the line over the side and no sign of life aboard the small craft.

TWO OUTBOARDS

"We feel he must have accidentally gone over the side. He'd obviously had engine trouble. There were two outboards on the stern, 60 horse power and 10 horse power. The cover was off the big engine and a sparkplug wrench was in place. Another plug was on the seat. So was a heavy mackinaw.

"There was no fuel line attached to the small motor, so he must have been relying on the larger one for getting him out of there.

"There was a coil of yellow rope attached to an anchor, with the rope leading up to the bow of the boat. He may have tried to go up forward to put out a sea anchor and lost his balance."

When the Lazy Gal reached the runabout Redgrave and his friend could see the fishing line was acting as an anchor.

"All of the line off the reel was gone and it must have caught on the bottom. By the time we got a line on her, though, she was only 25 feet offshore."

HELPED IN SEARCH

They towed the runabout back to Gilbert's marina at Brentwood and went out again Sunday afternoon to help in the search.

Originally from Nova Scotia, Allen is described by friends as being an experienced outdoorsman and sportsman.

Glynn Jones of B.C. Tel said today, "Bruce was no rookie. He's been around boats all his life. He was a great hunter, fisherman and curler."

Allen is married and has two boys living at home and an older daughter in Edmonton.

An Esquimalt man, David Jones, of 557 Paradise, had a narrow escape Saturday night when gale-force southeasterlies drove his rowboat on rocks at Work Point.

Jones scrambled ashore near Work Point Barracks and later military police helped him salvage the craft.

A Cal 28 sloop, Tshimshian, owned by R. W. Wichstrom, 3929 Garnet, was driven high and dry on the beach at Cadboro Bay Saturday when her engine failed and the sheet of one of her sails fouled.

'Lock-Up' Ordered For 17-Year-Old

A 17-year-old youth charged with the attempted murder of a two-year-old girl was remanded in custody for the statutory eight-day period when he appeared this morning in provincial court.

Judge William Ostler, who noted that the legal status of 17-year-olds is still "a matter of uncertainty" in British Columbia, ordered the youth detained in a "lock-up" until his next appearance March 16.

He said he was aware of legal uncertainty as to whether a 17-year-old was a child or an adult in the eyes of the law.

The uncertainty arose Jan. 29 when Judge John Anderson of Vancouver provincial court ruled that 17-year-olds should be heard in juvenile or family courts, not in adult courts.

'SUCH GRAVITY'

This threw out a federal law of last year transferring youths of that age to the jurisdiction of adult courts.

"If the accused is an adult, no problem exists," Ostler said.

He said, however, that because "the crime charged is one of such gravity" he could not justify releasing the accused in his own recognizance.

Ostler also said the youth "can't safely be confined" in a detention home for children because of his age and the nature of the charge against him.

But he said an application for either cash or surety bail would be considered as soon as the youth had obtained counsel.

LEGAL AID

Ostler asked that proceedings to obtain legal aid for the youth be continued until such time as the prosecution was notified that a lawyer had been hired privately.

The youth, charged Friday with trying to murder Fiona Fay Boucher, made a brief appearance in provincial court Saturday morning and was remanded to this morning by Judge Harold Alder.

FIRST TIME

The remand was the first time since Jan. 29 that the court has assumed jurisdiction over a 17-year-old.

Ostler noted that "prosecutors have consistently requested and received adjournments" in cases involving 17-year-olds.

All other 17-year-olds have been remanded and released in their own recognizance pending the outcome of a Supreme Court case to determine their legal status.

Meanwhile the judge originally scheduled to hear the case in Vancouver, Feb. 26, will not hear it until next Friday. The judge's ruling is not expected until March 19 or later.

The Boucher child, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Boucher, 643 John, was found early Friday morning lying in a pool of blood in a bathroom shared by tenants in the house where she lives.

She is undergoing treatment at Royal Jubilee Hospital for a skull-fracture.

Recently studying for his doctorate at Yale, he will work with members of the Commons and its senior staff beginning Sept. 1. Interns are paid a non-taxible $6,000 for the 10-month period. MacDonald is the son of Queen's Printer Ken MacDonald.

Saanich Rejects Joint Negotiating

Saanich has turned down an offer made by Victoria council to form a single bargaining unit to negotiate civic employee union contracts.

A letter arrived at city hall today, signed by the Saanich municipal clerk, saying simply that "Saanich municipal council is of the opinion that there are certain advantages to negotiate separately as at present and therefore does not wish to participate in joint negotiations."

Told of the letter, Mayor Courtney Haddock expressed disappointment.

"It seems to me that advantages outnumber the disadvantages. Well, we tried in the city."

Ald. Peter Pollen, who had pushed for joint negotiations, said: "I am bitterly disappointed in that the municipality of Saanich, with its outstanding municipal leader, should take such a very short-sighted attitude towards this urgently required negotiating process.

"The advantages expressed by Saanich completely escape me."

24-Hour Pickets Set for Hospital

Round-the-clock picketing is planned to shut down the Sandringham Private Hospital "if necessary" to bring a five-month strike to an end, the president of the Canadian Union of Public Employees said today.

Stan Little of Ottawa said if such action causes inconvenience to patients "they should point their finger at the employer."

Little was in Victoria Sunday to meet the women who have been walking the picket line in front of the hospital since Sept. 30. He also addressed officials of the Victoria Labor Council.

"We have to start making the strike sufficiently inconvenient for the employer so that he'll be forced to bargain with us," Little said.

"This man has decided to act in an irresponsible manner — he has refused to recognize the basic concept of collective bargining, and the public couldn't care less.

"Turning the clock back 25 years is not the answer."

Little was appalled the strike had not lasted for five months without a settlement. He admitted he had not been fully informed about the Sandringham situation until he arrived here.

Round-the-clock picketing now is seen as the only way of preventing supplies, particularly fuel for heat, from being delivered to the hospital, Little said.

Local CUPE representative Tom Smith said the stepped-up picketing could be accomplished with volunteers from local unions. He could not say when it would begin.

PRAISED BY JUDGES, POLICE

Fund Lack Threatens Indian Legal Aid

Lack of funds could end the career of Canada's first Indian court worker after only 12 months on the job in Victoria.

If the pilot project initiated by the John Howard Society is allowed to die it will mean the Indians in trouble with the law won't get specialized counselling services.

Grants from the federal department of Indian affairs and northern development and the provincial First Citizen's Fund made it possible for the John Howard Society of Vancouver Island to hire a court worker in February, 1970.

But the grants will soon run out, and there has been no indication from either federal or provincial sources whether they will be renewed.

Mike Bennett, executive director of the John Howard Society, explained that in creating the position the society was acting in response to the $66,000 Canadian Corrections Association report, The Indian and the Law, which reported lack of formal education and different cultural background prevent Indians from asserting their rights when they are brought in contact with law enforcement agencies.

John Joe, 25, the man the society hired a year ago, has been praised by judges and police officers since he began attending provincial court to give advice to Indians who are to make court appearances.

He also helps out in obtaining bail, legal aid, pre-sentence reports, clothing, money, housing or by referring people to other agencies.

"As far as the attitude of court officials goes, they believe this is something that's overdue," Joe said.

He said there is a tremendous need for court workers elsewhere in B.C., especially in isolated areas were all law enforcement agencies are vested in one man, the local RCMP officer.

He'd like to see wider use of the suspended sentence and probation rather than jail sentences, particularly for liquor offences.

JOE
. something overdue

Some Indians prefer to plead guilty in court because they believe they will receive a lesser punishment than if they attempt to fight the charge.

"I don't think this is something that's peculiar to the Indian people. Ignorance of the courts is pretty widespread — it's just more prevalent among the Indian people."

A survey conducted by the John Howard Society in 1967 revealed Indians make up 15 per cent of the population of the Island's four major penal institutions (William Head) Vancouver Island unit, and Lakeview and Snowdon forestry camps), although they constitute only three per cent of the population at large on the Island.

In a brief submitted to the federal government in November, 1970, the society indicated it is willing to assume responsibility for training of court workers to work in other parts of the province if money is made available.

Estimated minimum cost of maintaining the current pilot project for another year is $11,752, as outlined in another brief submitted in November to the First Citizen's Fund, which is under the jurisdiction of the minister of municipal affairs.

A statement from that brief, which was written by H. B. Dick, the chairman of the society's Indian counsellor project, underlines the importance of maintaining it:

"The discontinuation of the project at this time would not only mean the waste of valuable training time and potential of a competent counsellor, but also the confidence of the Indian people that their rights are held to be as important as those of other citizens; that services exist which are designed to meet their special needs."

Champagne Headache For House of Dior

PARIS (UPI) —The House of Christian Dior today denied rumors its high fashion salon was closing, and said the house is "no more for sale than the Eiffel Tower."

Rumors the largest salon in the world's fashion capital was in financial trouble stemmed from a January announcement that Moet et Chandon Champagne Co. had bought a controlling interest in Dior perfume.

French and American publications speculated Moet et Chandon would choose champagne over clothes and that the Dior high fashion collections of Marc Bohan would be abandoned.

But Jacques Rouet, director of the salon since it opened with the late designer Dior in 1947, summoned the press to his grey-and-white office to insist the deal involved only perfumes, not clothing, and "Dior still is open, in fact seeking more space to expand. The house is no more for sale than the Eiffel Tower."

Rouet admitted Bohan's high fashion hand-made creations no longer bring a lion's share of profits, as at all Paris houses. Of Dior's $73 million sales in 1970, $25 million came from perfume, 19.6 million from accessories (shoes, stockings, ties, sweaters, etc.), $8.1 million from high fashion and $7.2 million from ready-to-wear.

The couture business, as at all Paris houses, has diminished because "there are fewer buyers from small designing houses, stores and manufacturers and less private clients for high fashion because the cost of handwork is very high now.

"Each high fashion dress is very costly, like making a car." But Dior never will eliminate its high fashion department, he said.

Wind and Waves Attend Wedding

The wind and the waves were members of the wedding party when Grant Renesse Gislason married Patricia Gail Reeve Saturday.

Thirty friends and relataves attended the simple ceremony performed by Rev. Arthur Wilmot of the Unitarian Church of Victoria.

"We sort of feel marriage should be a natural thing," the bridegroom explained later." The closer to nature one gets, the more natural one becomes."

The stretch of beach they chose for the ceremony was one they had often walked together.

Grant is currently a guitarist with Frendlyn Page while Patricia is a belt weaver and potter. Both are students of yoga and like to meditate on the beach.

Both came to Victoria four years ago with their separate families, Grant is from Gimli, Man. and Patricia from Ottawa.

Mothers and Menus Defeated by Baby

By JOAN HANAUER

NEW YORK (UPI) — Babies come in two varieties, besides, the obvious — those that eat and those that do not eat.

It is very easy to cook for either variety of child. Those that eat usually will gulp down almost anything put before them, with the possible exception of vegetables.

Those that won't eat will turn down veal orloff with the same disdain as hamburger. So forget the gourmet menus.

Survey the books on child care and they all carry the same advice that my own pediatrician offered:

"No child ever starved to death in the midst of plenty."

Obviously, none of these learned men had ever met my daughter at dinner table.

As a milk-drinker, she could do better on a bottle than W. C. Fields. But the first time I tried to spoon a taste of baby cereal into her mouth she gave me the kind of look usually delivered by Lucretia Borgia's victims just before they breathed their last.

Over the last almost three years, I've developed my own methods which have the advantage of being kitchen and baby tested — and occasionally even work.

The early meals are pretty routine, prescribed in detail by the pediatrician. His prime rule is never introduce a new food until the previous one has been tested for several days. This has nothing to do with junior's taste buds — it's just to determine if any allergies are lurking beneath the pink and white exterior.

Check Labels

Many books suggest that by six to nine months, baby should be eating with the rest of the family. That's fine if the rest of the family wants an early dinner and if parents want to eat with children around.

But if Dad doesn't get home from work until 7-7:30 and wants dinner about 8:30-9 p.m., the family dinner is out of the question and baby will survive.

Baby foods are fine at first, and there also are toddler meals on the market. A word of advice — check the labels carefully. Monosodium glutamate (MSG) is not recomfended for small children and most reputable baby food manufacturers have discontinued using it. But some supermarkets still have the old MSG — added food in stock and on shelves because apparently they are unwilling to lose a few cents by throwing it out. Check content labels.

Babies who are poor eaters don't like to chew, except perhaps on furniture legs. Some consider it corporal punishment. The only solution is to offer something that requires an absolute minimum of chewing. My own pediatrician recommended raw hamburger. This is best either ground at home or at a butcher where you can watch and where you know rules against grinding pork and beef in the same machine are strictly observed. Buy lean beef.

Soup is another expedient, although it is not as nourishing as it might be for the amount of room it displaces inside baby.

All beef hotdogs (cooked, of course) are another possible baby pleaser, boi lthem, don't grill them, for easiest chewing.

No matter what you serve, be sure it isn't hot. A baby who scalds his tongue on food once can easily become convinced that same thing will happen every time.

The experts agree that the key word in feeding reluctant eaters is "offer" — you "offer" baby food. If he turns you down, either eat it yourself or throw it out. Sometimes it helps if you nibble a bit on his dinner, acting as a food taster to assure him he isn't being poisoned. But this seldom works for long.

Our family found proof of this slogan when baby had to take medicine. The first type, which she refused to drink, we disguised in grape juice. She didn't know what grape juice was supposed to taste like (it stains when spilled and had been taboo), so she drank it up without a problem.

Then a second medicine was prescribed. Since baby adored here rare encounters with Coca-Cola (usually given to keep her quite when dining out), we disguised the medicine in that. After a week of being nagged to drink her (medicine-laced) Coke, she decided she preferred ginger ale and hasn't wanted cola since.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Love Life Is Off Schedule

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Do I have a legitimate complaint or not? The only time my wife will have anything to do with me is on a Thursday night, because Friday is the day she gets her hair done.

Now Thursday nights are out because I belong to a bowling league which used to bowl every Wednesday, but they changed it to Thursday, and I don't get home from bowling until after midnight, and my wife is already asleep by then.

I am not about to give up bowling, Abby, and I think a man is entitled to some affection at least once a week. I am missing out. Any suggestions will be greatly appreciated. Don't sign my name or I will miss out forever.—Cheated.

DEAR CHEATED: Ask your wife to change her beauty parlor day. (She's missing out, too!) Arrange a time schedule for that which should be spontaneous is not exactly up my alley.

DEAR ABBY: Mine is a very touchy problem. A very close friend of ours who worked with my husband died after a long illness. During the illness, my husband gave him about a dozen books to read. One was especially cherished because it was personally incribed by Irving Stone, the author. It has been over a year since our friend died and his widow has made no effort to return the books. Not wanting to give her anything more to worry about than she already had, I never mentioned it to her. I know she's aware that the books have not yet been returned because she once remarked, "I am so ashamed of myself for not having returned those books yet."

If the books could be replaced, we'd forget it, but most of them have been out of print long ago. Please advise.—Faithful Reader.

DEAR READER: Telephone the widow and ask her when it would be convenient for you to bring her some cookies, flowers, or something else you have for her. And while you're there, remind her of the books she forgot to return.

DEAR ABBY: This is for the bride of four months who signed herself Unhappy, because her husband never said, "I love you." And he never complimented her on the way she looked, or told her how much he enjoyed the dinner.

Listen, child, I've been married for 36 years and my husband never told me he loved me. And he doesn't compliment me on how I look or how I cook. He doesn't have to.

He shows it in everything he does. He has worked like a dog all our married life to provide me and our four children with the best of everything. He's never looked at another women. He's strong and kind and generous. And he's always there when I need him.

Actions speak louder than words. Words come so easy for some and so hard for others. His actions are enough proof of his love for me. I thank God every day for my wonderful husband, and wonder how I ever got so lucky.—Indianapolis.

CONFIDENTIAL TO D. D. J.: 'Twas I who have said on more than one occasion that "love is a mental disease." In a very real sense it is. Perhaps that explains why so many marriages fail. They were contracted while both parties were out of their minds.

For Abby's new booklet, "What Teen-agers Want to Know," send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069.

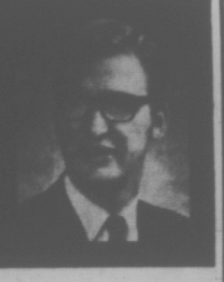
IMPORT REPORT



By DAVID CARERE

BELIEVE IT OR NOT— SOMEBODY IS DOING SOMETHING!

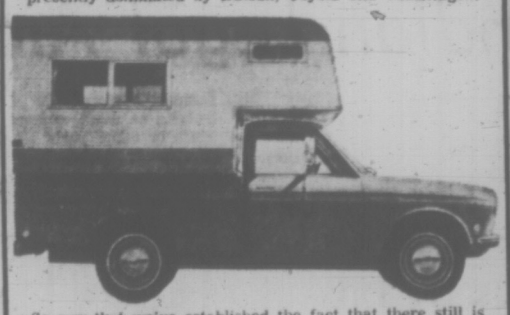
For a clear understanding of our responsibilities in the current ecological crisis we must look at both sides of the coin. Pollution is one of the most contentious issues of our times and it is unfortunate that many of the facts have been misrepresented.

The popular criminal in the pollution scandal is the automobile. Many ecologists advocate immediate removal of the car from our highways. Well before we outlaw the car and cripple the world's economy, let's look at what's being done to eliminate some of the bad effects of cars. Sweden is foremost in the field of pollution control and for years now the Volvo and Saab have been equipped with emission control systems that are virtually exhaust free. The Swedes are in the advanced stages of developing a rapid transit system consisting of flywheel powered and electrically charged buses.

The United States, with grants from the National Air Pollution Control Administration, has sponsored the development of several designs of rotary continuous combustion engines that are pollution free. An 80 horsepower model invented by a Michigan research group is said to be flawless and therefore marketable.

Also in the U.S., G.M. is modifying the old version of the steam engine and hope to update it as another alternative to the internal combustion engine.

While we are waiting on the implementation of these new methods it seems the only way one can really limit his pollution capacity is to burn less fuel. The car with the highest mileage per gallon is obviously the car that will be putting less waste into the air. For this reason alone, thousands of Americans and Canadians are switching every day to the new sub-compact class . . . a class presently dominated by Datsun, Toyota and Volkswagen.



So now that we've established the fact that there still is some hope for the countryside you can start thinking about your summer camping trip again. Maybe you'd like to tour the campgrounds of your choice this summer in a new Datsun Pickup Camper combination? Our own model of camper is completely equipped for on-the-road living and offers most of the comforts of home (television excluded). The new 1600 model truck features and gutsy new highway motor with the same extensive emission control devices as the sedan. A package deal of truck and camper costs you $3,750.00. See our spring supply of campers and trucks at David Motors . . . then decide for yourself.

Medieval Memorials Treasured

Surrounding Mrs. Gerry Cranstoun are her brass rubbing souvenirs from England. Laurence de Sancto Mauro alias "Hector the Rector," held by Mrs. Cranstoun, was Rector of Higham Ferrers Church from 1298 to 1337. Framed on the side wall are Thomas Buriton and his wife from Streatley-on-Thames, Berkshire and Bishop Langeton from Exeter Cathedral. At Exeter Cathedral Mrs. Cranstoun was required to sign a statement saying she wouldn't sell the completed rubbing.

Brass Rubbers Wax Enthusiastic

By SALLY GLOVER

"Hector the Rector" is in Victoria.

He's hanging beside the fireplace in the home of Mrs. Gerry Cranstoun and pretty much attached to his place of honor — by plywood and red velvet.

"Hector" is a brass rubbing, one of four in the Cranstoun's home at 2713 Somass Drive.

Mrs. Cranstoun was intrigued with a brass rubbing in a friend's home, and promptly borrowed the only two books on the subject from the Victoria library.

Then she joined hundreds of other tourists and Britishers with black wax and architectural paper to rub the brass engravings marking centuries-old graves.

On either side of the fireplace hang the two most impressive brass rubbings, each five feet tall.

They have been laboriously cut out with a pair of nail scissors, because, Mrs. Cranstoun admits, "I smeared some of the edges on my first efforts."

"Hector the Rector," or Laurence de Sancto Mauro is backed on a piece of plywood cut to the same shape as Hector. The edges are painted black and this backed rubbing is attached to another piece of plywood covered in red velvet.

Even though Laurence de Sancto Mauro is one of the oldest brass works in England, the rubbing is clearer than most because the engraving was done on the top of a coffin, rather than on the floor, where metal from shoes may scar it.

Mrs. Cranstoun attached the other large rubbing, Thomas Busshe and his wife to plywood over which she had stretched unbleached cotton. "When I'd finished, it looked so bare that I decided to stud it with coppery furniture nails."

A sheep and a sack of wool at the base of each figure show that Thomas and Johane were wool merchants by occupation. A circled bush in the middle of the arch above their heads is a pun or "rebus" on the name "Busshe."

At the bottom of each rubbing where the original waxed inscription should be Mrs. Cranstoun has copied information about the brass on a separate piece of parchment paper. She used old English lettering and carefully burnt the edges to make it blend with the original inscription.

An easier, and much less time consuming way to acquire facsimiles of memorial brasses is to buy prints, such as the two above, which sell at bargain prices in souvenir shops at stately homes of England. Sir Robert de Bures, left, rests his feet on a lion, in keeping with a tradition carried over from stone effigies. The carvers found feet looked better on dogs or lions that pointing inelegantly skywards.

Mrs. Cranstoun is still very excited about her rubbings and says, "Once you study brasses just a little, you can't help but be intrigued."

Some of her enthusiasm for brass rubbing rubbed off on her daughter Eve, who was involved in a short-lived group involved in a short-lived group-effort to rub and sell this form of art while hitchhiking around Europe.

A British policeman happened along five minutes after they'd set up their first display on the cathedral lawn.

"You're not planning to sell those lovely rubbings, are you? he asked. "Because I've just put a chap in the clink for peddling."

He winked and turned away.

The girls packed it up.

Not all brass memorials are available for public use, commercially or personally.

Richard K. Morris, a lecturer in Medieval art history at the University of Victoria says everything in any church or cathedral is the vicar's religious possession. The vicar is the legal guardian and has the authority to either allow or forbid a duplicate of any memorial.

Morris, who was a restorer of brasses in England and is now a member of the executive council of the Monumental Brass Society, said the influx of brass rubbers has created many problems, resulting in the locking of some churches.

Many churches depend on the revenue from commercial rubbings.

"St. Thomas has heated the church," wrote one vicar to Morris after the sale of a rubbing of the saint.

Other vicars found their brasses such a nuisance, they have forbidden rubbing for any purpose. A church with popular brass gets as many as a dozen letters and calls a day.

An English vicar told a story about a canon who asked to move recently, and told the Bishop he did not much mind where he was sent, "as long as there are no brasses."

Morris said some churches have loose brasses stolen, or brasses damaged when people kneel directly on them while rubbing.

The actual rubbing on a brass hasn't proved damaging. "It keeps them polished," Morris said.

The popularity of brass-rubbing is increasing — but the brasses aren't.

Morris advises that anyone interested in brass rubbing make an appointment three or four months before leaving for England to avoid having to wait.

Spanish Leather Is Back

By FLORENCE DE SANTIS

There was a time when the best leather in gloves and other accessories, was known everywhere to come from Spain. Now that memory is being revived with the return of Spanish leather designed by Pertegaz and American talent into clothes for a house known here as Ledaspain.

Using American know-how about clothes construction, and Spanish skill in tanning and working leather, Ledaspain creates such coats as a luggage tan smooth leather with inset panels of calf with the hair side out. Glove-fine antelope suede becomes pants costumes or skirts with fringed hems. In Spain, Colomer, one of the largest tanneries, produced the leathers and supervises the making of the clothes.

The quality of Spanish leather work is seen in the fine detailing and stitching, as well as in the surface of the leathers themselves.

Rubbed Out

Thomas Busshe and his wife Johane are displayed on five feet of plywood, backed on white unbleached cotton and studded with coppery nails. The actual brass differs from Mrs. Cranstoun's. There was an arch over each figure in the church. The Busshe's were wool merchants, a trade common in 16th Century England. Thomas died in 1526. No information could be found indicating the date of Johane's death.

Canada Airborne For Sovereignty

By WALTER McKINNON

"When you're up to your ass in alligators, it is difficult to remind yourself your initial objective was to drain the swamp."

That cynical epigram is currently Mike Taylor's favorite saying, perhaps because it reflects so well the frustrations and contradictions of a professional military man in a peacetime role.

Taylor is 29 years old, a crisply competent, conscientious soldier. He has been in the Royal Canadian Air Force and now the Canadian Armed Forces for 13 years, for the past three of them a captain. He takes his job seriously.

At specified intervals, Taylor, as crew commander of Flight Six, 407 Squadron, Canadian Forces Base Comox, takes command of a four-engined Argus aircraft, 157,000 pounds of sophisticated electronics, highly volatile fuel and flying machine, and with 14 other professional young men takes off in search of an intangible.

Capt. Taylor and his crew, when they are not patrolling Canada's west coast in anti-submarine operations, cover the vastness of the northland in pursuit of that political dream called Arctic sovereignty.

For a professional warrior such a task must be frustrating. He has been trained to achieve objectives. When an searching for an intangible

intangible is his objective he can never know whether or not he has been successful.

The quest of Taylor and his companions in 407 Squadron is not a new one — Samuel Hearne in 1771 crossed the Canadian Arctic from Churchill to the mouth of the Coppermine in seach of that same will o' the wisp.

In recent years, however, advanced science and technology have turned it into a vital nationalistic and political issue, by demonstrating the potential wealth of the North.

And Canada, with the largest territorial area in the Arctic, has the biggest stake in the game. Territorial sovereignty traditionally is based on occupation and control. Canada, therefore, is showing the flag in the Arctic to demonstrate control.

Sovereignty flights such as Taylor and his crew carry out are not new — Canadian military aircraft have been patrolling the Arctic for several years.

But last week, for the first time, the press accompanied the Comox flight.

The objectives of these flights were spelled out by Lt.-Commander Dan Desko, the United States Navy officer attached to 407 Squadron on an exchange basis as operations officer.

"We are interested in everything that goes on up there," he stressed. Oil exploration, pollution, new settlements and native movements, even the migratory patterns of animals in the Arctic come under scrutiny of the Argue crew on patrol.

Anti-submarine patrol in the Arctic Ocean has also in recent years become a vital function of the armed forces. Since the United States submarine Nautilus in August of 1958 became the first vessel to cross the North Pole under the ice, Canada has been aware of submarine activity in that area.

Canada is in the North as a military presence, Desko explained, because it has to be pollution, new settlements

and "we want the rest of the world to know we are there."

To facilitate its primary role in anti-submarine patrol, the Argus is equipped with elaborate electronic sensors, some of which are even capable of detecting a submarine sailing under the Arctic pack ice.

The Argus itself is an impressive weapon. Canadian built and in use for well over a decade, it is powered by four engines, each capable of delivering a maximum 3,700 horsepower to push the 128-foot airframe to a cruising speed of approximately 200 knots.

It has a wingspan of 142 feet, three inches, and remarkable manoeuvrability for an aircraft of its size.

It regularly carries a crew of three pilots, 10 radio-navigators and two flight engineers.

They were on hand the morning of the mission for a 5 a.m. briefing, aircraft boarding at approximately 6:20 a.m. for takeoff at 7 a.m.

Forty minutes from takeoff the routine vanished when an alert crew member smelled fuel fumes. Taylor and his

emergency in the air

crew reacted instantly, shutting down the furnaces which heat the aircraft and prevent icing of wing surfaces. All equipment which could cause sparks was shut down and the flight engineers and safety officer began the hunt for the problem.

It was quickly located — a cracked fuel line allowing raw high-octane gasoline to flow into the bomb bays.

At that point the situation became an emergency. All potential fire hazards ewere eliminated and Taylor pushed his plane up to 13,000 feet for a fast return to Comox "over the Rocks," as they call the rugged coastal mountains.

The decision to abort the mission was made at Ashcroft, in the B.C. interior and the return was in a direct line, straight across some of the highest peaks in the province.

Safely across the mountains and over the sea between Vancouver Island and the mainland, Taylor eased his plane down to 3,000 feet for a fuel dump, essential for a safe landing back at Comox.

In six minutes 2,200 gallons of fuel poured from the tanks into the atmosphere. It wasn't water pollution, however. Dumped at an altitude of 3,000 feet the fuel had all evaporated before it reached the ground.

Taylor estimated he had poured $500 worth of fuel into the atmosphere but "We don't take chances when it comes to the safety of our crew."

The fire trucks were on the runway when the giant Argus touched down but according to Taylor later it was just a routine precaution. "They like to come out for these things because it's the only chance they ever get to use their sirens."

Twenty-four hours later the same crew and the same aircraft were airborne again on the same mission, but the press contingent had been reduced from three to two.

The actual mission was an anticlimax — close to 20 hours in the air, 3,600 miles on patrol from Canada's southern extremity to the Arctic Ocean and back, routine, monotonous and within the structure of its defined objectives, a complete success.

moose, wolf shown the flag

It flew from Comox to Vancouver, up the Fraser River to the interior plateaus, over the Peace River flatlands and northern Alberta into the Northwest Territories.

North of the 60th parallel Taylor dropped to altitudes as low as 100 feet from the ground and rarely higher than 500, to begin his northern patrol.

It showed the flag to countless moose, at least one wolf, two natives with dog teams, a significant part of the populations of Norman Wells, Arctic Red River and Inuvik, and a three-man oil crew.

And that was its objective.

Spectacular was the flight up the Mackenzie, 600 miles of flying at altitudes so low that animal tracks were clearly visible in the snowy surface of Canada's largest river.

At Inuvik in the Mackenzie Delta, almost on the Arctic Ocean, Taylor lifted the plane to a slightly higher altitude, made a pass for the benefit of the press and turned for the long trip home to a midnight landing in Comox.

The flag had been waved again.

THE ARGUS, Canada's airborne submarine warfare weapon and a complex electronic detection laboratory, has been in use since the mid-1950s. It is to be retired by the middle of this decade but its replacement has not yet been selected.

OUR TRUE NORTH IN 'U.S.' HANDS

Times Staff

Consider the paradox that is Dan Desko.

A career military man, father of two, possessed of a glib turn of phrase and the mien of a Carnegie course graduate, Desko has recently been assigned as operations officer, Canadian Forces 407 Squadron based at Comox.

That squadron is charged with responsibility for showing the Maple Leaf in the North, declaring Canada's sovereignty in the Arctic.

Dan Desko, 34 years old, is a United States citizen and in active service as a lieutenant-commander in the United States Navy.

An American officer involved in such a purely nationalistic endeavor as declaring and maintaining Canada's Arctic sovereignty?

This anomaly underscores the unique and often uncomfortably complicated position Canada occupies in the defensive structure of the North American continent, committed to and largely dependent upon the massive, albeit benevolent, presence south of the border.

Lt.-Commander Desko, USN, is an exchange officer, one of hundreds attached on an active basis to Canadian military operations. And in the United States there are a like number of Canadian military men filling equally vital posts in that nation's armed forces.

Desko is quick to recognize the incongruity of a situation which places a foreign national in a key slot in Canada's struggle to declare itself sovereign in the Arctic. But he seems almost hypersensitive about it (he declined to have his picture taken) and would rather Canadians were unaware of it.

He suggests it is a matter of coincidence.

"My position in this squadron is that I am not temporary or any kind of a visiting member of a foreign country or anything else . . . I am assigned directly, as any other Canadian officer, under control of the commanding officer on exchange duty and this is by agreement of our governments," he says.

"I wear a different color of uniform simply because of the place where some little stork chose to drop me and that is as simple as that," he adds a moment later.

Prior to becoming operations officer for 407 Squadron Desko was in a potentially even more anomalous situation, as crew captain of an Argus aircraft, actually leading Canadian sovereignty missions himself.

"It so happens the reason I got this particular job was purely coincidental," he says. "Seniority-wise, the squadron had a deficiency . . . and the next man down the line who was due for a shore job in the squadron with the rank required was this officer and I was assigned. Simple as that."

Desko goes to some length to make clear there are no sinister overtones implicit in his presence at Canadian Forces Base Comox.

"There is one aspect I would like you to be aware of and that is I do not encroach in any way upon the policy of Canadian sovereignty. There are things I know exist in any military that are purely national and not for foreign release and I do not see anything of this nature."

Sinister or not, simple coincidence or not, it remains an anomaly — an American naval officer is vitally involved in Canada's struggle to declare northern sovereignty.

And he's on our side.

The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want.
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters.
He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.
Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.

Tonight's Top Television Shows

CABLEVISION 10 PROGRAMS, 7 p.m., Ladies First; 7:30 p.m., Project Travel; 8 p.m., Music Victoria; 8:30 p.m., Victoria Outdoorsmen—Sailing Edition; 9 p.m., Canadian Forces Pacific—CFB Esquimalt; 9:30 p.m., Connections; 10 p.m., Tomorrow-Today; 10:15 p.m., The Pacemakers.

RED SKELTON, 7:30 p.m., Channel 5. Tony Randall is tonight's guest. Randall plays a TV director giving politician San Fernando Red instructions on projecting the proper image for television. In the show's silent spot, Red plays an anxious dental patient, and later spoofs TV in his monologue.

REEL GAME, 8:30 p.m. Channel 4. Jack Benny is tonight's surprise guest with three questions about his life and career from the panelists. Many of tonight's film clips include seldom seen footage of actors.

HERE'S LUCY, 7 p.m. Channel 6, 8:30 p.m. Channel 7. (RERUN). Lucy's good intentions again lead her astray in tonight's episode. She pretends to be interested in skydiving and Uncle Harry traps her with promises of fame.

MONDAY NIGHT MOVIE, 9 p.m., Channel 4. (RERUN). "Mutiny on the Bounty" (1962), completing the two-night showing of the expensive remake of the sea classic. Starring Marlon Brando, Trevor Howard, Richard Harris, Hugh Griffiths and Tarita.

REALITIES, 9 p.m., Channel 9. "David Lean: A Self Portrait" looks, as the title implies, inward. The voice is the subject's, the director who made "Oliver Twist," "Great Expectations," "The Bridge on the River Kwai," "Lawrence of Arabia" and Dr. Zhivago." His words were recorded in a series of interviews while he was filming his recent "Ryan's Daughter" in Ireland. There's interesting footage of the filming of "Zhivago" and "Lawrence of Arabia" as well as Lean's candid comments on integrity and success.

MAYBERRY R.F.D., 9 p.m., Channel 7. Buddy Foster, as Sam's son Mike, carries much of the load tonight. Sam lets him buy an old car from Goober, thinking the boy will have fun tinkering, but won't get it started. Mike surprises them.

WORLD PREMIERE MOVIE, 9 p.m., Channel 5. (PART I) "Vanished," based on the Fletcher Knebel best-seller, is a giant effort by the network, made exclusively for television and shown on two consecutive nights. It is the first time that the movie rights for a best-seller were bought exclusvielv for TV. The story deals with a taut diplomatic situation involving disappearance of a physicist and President's closest friend, both suspected of defecting to China. The credibility is somewhat questionable, but fine performances and strong production values help. Richard Widmark, E. G. Marshall and Robert Young star.

CAROL BURNETT, 8:30 p.m. Channel 8, 10 p.m., Channel 7. TV personality Mike Douglas sings the theme from "Love Story" tonight and joins Carol in a medley including "For All We Know." Bernadette Peters is Carol's other guest. The comedy sketches include a spoof of an old musical "Most Happy Fella," a takeoff on summer stock and the problems of a tomboy.

5:30: Channel 13: Delinquent Parents (1938 Drama) Doris Weston, Maurice Murphy. A civic leader with chaotic past sees her daughter following the same wrong path that she did when she was young.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Every physician probably would say that he sees more women with nervous troubles than he sees men with nervous troubles. Certainly, that has been my strong impression during 65 years of practice. I was interested to see in Science News recently, an abstract of an article reporting answers to 12 questions given to a sample group of 7,710 persons in a health examination survey. It indicated that women do worry more and have more nervous problems than do men.

Among people who felt an impending nervous breakdown, there were 7.7 men to 17.8 women. Nervousness was complained of by 30.2 men and 65.6 women; insomnia by 24.1 men and 40.9 women, and nightmares by 6.9 men and 12.3 women.

Since worry is one of the greatest causes of illness and fatigue, every person with a tendency to this bad habit should make a big effort to break himself of it. Unfortunately, there are many persons with chronic illness or a loved one ill or at war, or with an unhappy love life, who can hardly be expected to stop worrying. We physicians who are inclined to say, "Stop worrying and forget it," might worry frantically if placed in a similar position. For persons who must worry I have only sympathy.

There are many persons who keep worrying all the time, usually in a foolish or needless way, and who make themselves sick because of this. Many a woman may be worrying about something every day of her life; and many may admit that when they haven't anything real to worry about, they make something up.

For instance, a wealthy woman of 55 with an affectionate family, a beautiful home, and perfect health, worried herself sick, feeling that since all her life fortune had so smiled upon her, it was about time that something terrible happened to her or her husband or one of her children. As a result, every time the telephone rang, she went to pieces and was unable to answer because she was so sure that it would be the police telling of some terrible accident that had happened to one of her loved ones.

I have seen hundreds of very unhappy women who were constantly worrying over the possibility that by a failure in judgment or devotion they had contributed much to the illness or death of a parent, husband, or child. They keep saying over and over again, "If I had only called another physician or taken my loved one to another hospital, or refused to permit an operation, the disaster would not have happened." I have constantly kept telling these people that the good Lord does not expect of us an ability to see into the future. I imagine all He asks is that we do the very best we can at the time of decision.

NO. 3 HAPPENING — You won't believe your eyes. About the prettiest home I have had the pleasure of selling in my six years of selling. The lady of the house spotted her dream house (an older mansion) just after moving in. About 2,600 feet of comfortable living on two levels. The view is over high Quadra to Mt. Baker and Vancouver way. Living room and dining room are in line with simulated beamed ceiling and expensive w-w carpeting. Two finished bedrooms are on this level, one of which can be "Rec" room. Basement area has workshop, laundry area and 2 piece service bathroom. Mackenzie Top-Rated Sub Killer

The West Coast's most efficient submarine killer is resting on her laurels after earning cock o' the walk status in the Esquimalt-based fleet.

She's captured the Murray Efficiency Trophy, the squadron communication trophy, the squadron efficiency trophy, and is runner-up for the sonar proficiency field.

The destroyer-escort HMCS Mackenzie is refitting in the dockyard of CFB, Esquimalt, and scheduled to be ready for sea duty again in mid-May.

Her captain, Cmdr. Gordon Armstrong, declined to take credit for his ship's prowess.

"I'm a newcomer here. I had nothing to do with winning the trophies," he said.

Armstrong took over command in late January from Cmdr. R. L. McClean, who is now armed forces co-ordinator for the B.C. centennial celebrations.

But Armstrong said some of the key personnel aboard Mackenzie when she earned her laurels are still serving in her and Mackenzie will be again working for top position when she resumes duties.

The trophies are awarded after ships have engaged in a series of exercise situations with the scoring based on the ship's average.

Mackenzie's date for refit completion may be altered if the threatened strike by dockyard workers materializes.

Construction Up On Peninsula

Saanich Peninsula building permits for January and February this year total $1,263,720, compared to $904,795 for the same period last year.

Central Saanich leads the way with permits issued for $553,000 ($309,537 in 1970). January figures are $199,800 and February $353,200.

Building inspector Jim Horel says that most of the new buildings are individually-contracted homes. Central Saanich is rapidly running out of regular size residential lots and the half-acre minimum imposed on land throughout the residential zone says Horel is curtailing subdivision development.

North Saanich figures shows considerable commerical development this year. Building permits in January total $63,634 but in February, the figure $266,176 includes plans for a marina and golf club.

The total $329,810 is, however, slightly less than the 1970 figure of $360,656.

Sidney has issued permits for 20 new houses this year and, with some commercial construction, the figures total $370,910, an increase over the 1970 figure of $348,441. January shows $181,680 worth of construction and February $189,220.

And Leave The Driving To Us . . .

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — It all started when a woman tried to board a bus in downtown Richmond with her German Shepherd dog.

It ended with the woman commandeering the bus and leading six police cruisers on a 20-block chase.

Police gave this account:

The woman tried to board a Virginia Transit Co. bus and was told by the driver she couldn't bring her dob along.

She got on anyway, with the dog, and sat down.

The driver got off to confer with his supervisor, and the passengers followed.

Police said the woman then slipped into the driver's seat and took off.

As the bus veered onto the city's main street, it sheared off a fire hydrant, sending a geyser into the air.

Police finally stopped the vehicle about a mile away by getting patrol cars in front and back of it.

As an officer wrestled his way onto the bus, it took off again with the patrolman struggling with the woman. He finally gained control of the vehicle and brought it to a stop.

Police said Edith Oliver Landers, 32, was charged with grand larceny of the $15,000 bus, assault on a police officer, hit-and-run and reckless driving.

She was due in court today.

Therapists May Form Counselling Institute

The proliferation of therapy groups locally has led a number of people in the field to try to bring all together in a new institute of counselling and psychotherapy.

Dr. Phillip Ney, a child psychiatrist, and Dr. Otfried Spreen, a psychology professor at the University of Victoria, suggest such an institute could have three objectives:

- By including the various professions and some of the lay groups involved, gain mutual benefit through sharing ideas and experience.
- Provide a basis for training people who don't feel they have sufficient training for the jobs they are expected to do.
- Provide the public with a registry of people who are competent to do various kinds of counselling.

Ney said a series of lectures is being arranged for later this month. Everybody working in the counselling or therapy field or interested in it will be invited to come along. The meetings will deal with what's happening in the field and will attempt to measure the wants of those attending.

One of the problems to be dealt with is the number of groups which have sprung up. Ney said in some cases some people unintentionally may be doing more harm than good.

War Air Ace Dies At 69

MONTREAL (CP) — Gordon Roy McGregor, 69, former president of Air Canada and wartime fighter ace in the Battle of Britain, died today.

A spokesman for Air Canada said Mr. McGregor died in Montreal General Hospital following a short illness.

Mr. McGregor, who after the second World War became one of the youngest presidents of any major airline, piloted Trans-Canada Air Lines—later Air Canada—into the jet age and to international renown among world carriers.

But it was as "Old Gordon" that he first won fame in the early days of the war when the guns of his Hurricane accounted for many enemy aircraft in the Battle of Britain.

At 38, he was for a time the oldest fighter pilot in the Battle of Britain and he was still "operational" in combat at the age of 44.

RETIRED IN 1968

"G. R." stepped down as Air Canada president May 31, 1968, 1½ years beyond the normal retirement age, after 20 years at the controls of the airline when it stepped to the threshold of the supersonic era.

Mr. McGregor, a native of Montreal, is survived by his wife, the former Alexandra May Ramsay, the Montreal girl he married in 1928. They had no children.

Song Writer Now Free

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Prison doors opened Saturday for song-writer Glen Sherley after 10 long years. Sunday, another door slammed behind him, that of Johnny Cash's gleaming dark Cadillac.

Sherley, paroled from prison in Vacaville, Calif., stepped from an airliner at Metro Airport Sunday into another world.

Many appeals by Cash and a recent telephone call to California Gov. Ronald Reagan by the Rev. Billy Graham were said to have led to the release of Sherley, who wrote the Cash-recorded "Greystone Chapel" as well as songs for Eddy Arnold while serving time for armed robbery.

CANUCKS GET GAME SWITCH

MONTREAL (CP) — Vancouver Canucks will get a brief rest next week after a 10-day road trip because the National Hockey League has rescheduled a game with Detroit Red Wings to Thursday from Wednesday.

An NHL spokesman said Vancouver had requested the change after a visit with Montreal Canadiens was postponed Thursday due to a vicious snowstorm and rescheduled for Tuesday.

The Canucks had faced the unhappy prospect of playing Montreal Tuesday and flying 3000 miles to play Detroit at home the next night.

U.S. STUDENTS PUSH TOURISM OVER SLAUGHTER

Live Seals Worth More Than Dead Ones

By ED WALTERS

CAP AUX MEULES, Que. (CP) — A group of students from the United States visited a seal herd on drift ice in the Gulf of St. Lawrence Sunday and later suggested that the area be turned into a tourist-attracting sanctuary for the animals.

"I think tourists would bring more money to the area than killing seals," said Susane Karliner, 15, a Grade 9 student from the Long Island, N.Y. suburb of Syosset.

But Brian Davies, executive director of the International Fund for Animal Welfare, said the cost of operating the helicopters to bring tourists to the seals would be too high for a private operator.

He suggested the federal government could subsidize such an operation since the seals had as much esthetic value as the art galleries supported by Ottawa.

FELL IN WATER

The students were visiting the herd at Mr. Davies' invitation during a trip promoted by the friends of animals inc. of New York.

Two of the teen-agers and a reporter fell to their hips in the Gulf's freezing water while visiting a herd 35 miles northwest of this Magdalen Islands' town Sunday.

Anne Cuneio, 17, of Sullivan, Mo., Richard Mureno, 17, of Brooklyn, N.Y., and Dick Krantz, 30, of the St. Louis Globe Democrat, fell through the ice almost simultaneously while returning to a helicopter after petting seal pups.

They scrambled to safety and were quickly flown back to their hotel.

Joyce Lambert, an official of the U.S. organization which uses no capitals in its name, accompanied others of the group to the herd in an uneventful trip earlier Sunday.

The students agreed the hunt should be banned but at least two said they realized such actions could mean economic hardship to some Canadian fishermen. Each described the hunt as cruel.

Oscar Hartzell, 18, a Grade 11 student at Roosevelt high school in St. Louis, said in an interview he realized the Canadian government could not end the hunt immediately without filling the economic gap.

"I still think it's wrong to kill them," said Hartzell.

QUOTA SET

Only Canadian ships may hunt in the Gulf where a quota of 50,000 seals has been set. Canadian ships may take another 50,000 in international waters on the front.

Norwegian ships are restricted to the front and have a quota of 100,000 seals. Shore-based hunters who do not have to observe the official date are allowed 45,000 seals in all areas.

Mr. Davies, who began a campaign several years ago to have the hunt banned, said the quota should be no greater than 125,000. He said a larger kill would decimate the herd.

But Joseph Geraci of the zoology department of the University of Guelph, Ont., who has spent the last four years studying the nutrition of harp seals in the Gulf, said the quota was based on annual seal-population surveys and the kill was not in excess of the maximum sustainable yield.

The main portion of the gulf herd, which local fishermen said was the area's largest in several years, drifted to within 12 miles of land by late Sunday.

NO CRUELTY FOUND

Dr. Geraci said a "very thorough investigation" in 1967 by an internationally-known veterinarian pathologists from five countries gathered conclusive evidence that no cruelty existed in the hunt.

Miss Lambert said the friends' organization, which pickets Canadian consular and airline offices in New York, hopes to interest the public in visiting the area to see the animals.

The trip by the four teenagers would "perhaps impress the Canadian government into seriously considering making the area a sanctuary."

Miss Lambert said the friends were aware the Norwegians were "brutal, if not more so than the Canadians." She also discounted claims that killing methods were humane. "The mother seal suffers as well—the bay seal suffers fear."

The pups are killed by being struck on the head by a 30-inch club, its weight and size set by government regulations.

Sub-Surface Moon Gas Astounds Scientist

WASHINGTON (WP) — An instrument left on the moon by the Apollo 14 astronauts has turned up the first hard evidence of gas escaping from beneath the lunar surface.

At the same time, a second instrument left at Apollo 14's Frau Mauro landing site detected a moon quake just about the time the first instrument found the gas, suggesting that the quake might have released the gas from the moon — or that the sudden venting of gas trapped in a cavern beneath the surface brought on the quake.

"We've had the first observation of a real gas cloud, with the tenuous suggestion that it is related to seismic activity," Columbia University's Dr. Gary Latham said at Houston's Manned Spacecraft Centre. "We have what definitely appears to be gas emission from the moon."

Called a cold-cathode ion gauge, the instrument that discovered the gas actually picked up two gas clouds less than a day apart from each other.

'ALMOST SPEECHLESS'

"I was almost speechless when I saw the first event," said Manned Spacecraft Centre scientist Dallas Evens, "and only a little less speechless the second time."

The first gas cloud reached the Fra Mauro site at 9:47 p.m. Feb. 21 and lasted one hour. The second arrived at 11:38 a.m. Feb. 22 and covered the site for more than 13 hours.

"The general inference here is that the first event was an impulse, like turning a light switch on and off," said Evans. "The second event was like turning the light switch on and leaving it on."

While there is an outside chance that the first event was the descent stage of the lunar landing craft venting some of its own gas, there is almost no possibility that the second gas event was man-made. The main reason is its long (13 hours) duration, since gas is vented from the landing craft in very short bursts of less than one minute.

It was the second gas cloud that was accompanied by a moon quake which was described by Columbia's Latham as a modest-sized quake and one of 16 which the Apollo 14 seismometer detected in a six-day period last month when the moon made its closest approach to Earth.

Scientists speculate that Earth's pull draws the moon's surface outward during this time, pulling the surface apart and hauling some of the hard rock below the surface up toward the top.

CAUSE OR EFFECT

In this time of maximum gravitation stress on the moon, gas that is normally trapped in cavities beneath the surface could escape from fissures in the surface. The escaping gas might either cause a moon quake or be the result of one.

Just what kind of gas has been discovered by the Apollo 14 instruments is not known, but scientists theorize that it is either helium or one of the earth's rare gases, like argon or krypton.

The fact that large pockets of gas is beneath the moon suggests that the moon's interior is complex and possibly still warm, even though the gases themselves might be cool.

Latham said the second gas cloud detected on the moon might have come from some distance away from the Fra Mauro site.

He said astronomers around the world will be asked if they saw any reddish or blue glows on the moon at the time of the second cloud, since many astronomers have long claimed to have seen flashes of light on the moon that could be clouds of gas escaping from beneath the surface.

Friends Map Three Projects

By ELIZABETH FORBES

A comparatively new and active group of people, representing 10 organizations and banded together under the name of the Friends of the Provincial Museum, has come up with three ambitious projects to which its energies will be devoted in this centennial year.

Forbes

Talk to Doug Turnbull, president of this group, and you cannot help re-acting to his enthusiasm for all three projects.

The first is one that certainly should creat instant support. It is to raise money through donations from individuals and organizations for a Dr. Clifford Carl memorial.

Already there is a nucleus for this fund but as Doug Turnbull puts it "many more donations are needed if the memorial is to be a worthy one."

So far there has been no firm decision as to the form of such a memorial. "Scholarship awards have been considered but there have also been other suggestions put forward."

Here Mr. Turnbull makes a request of those who may wish to have a part in this memorial. He says "send your donations direct to the Friends of the Museum."

This is a sensible plea because there is actually nothing in the statutes that allows the museum, as such, to accept and keep donations of this nature.

Therefore, such monies do find their way into general revenue. "henT it is difficult if not downright impossible to get it back into a special fund."

Second project undertaken by the "Friends" is renovation and restoration of the pioneer school house that the Sisters of St. Ann recently presented to the provincial museum.

This little building is a part of the early history of Victoria. It was opened by the first four sisters to arrive here on June 5, 1858.

The building is described in an old journal as "30 by 18 feet, made of the trunks of the trees — no fence, no outhouses, not even a wood shed, no well."

Over the years the Sisters have carefully preserved the historic schoolroom on a site behind the Convent. Now it is to have a new setting between Helmcken House and Thunderbird Park in the Heritage Court complex.

The Real Estate Board of Victoria will move the old building over to the new site, as its centennial project. Then the "Friends" will start renovations and restoration.

Lights and plumbing will be added "and eventually the place will be used as a working classroom for children who come to the museum for various learning sessions."

Third undertaking of the group, only organized a little over a year ago, is to help as it can, in recreation of Old Victoria, on the third floor of the museum.

"Again we'll be looking for donations," Mr. Turnbull explains, "furnishings as well as money."

Then he tells you that through the "Friends" the firm of McGill and Orme has pledged a sum of several hundred dollars in each of the next five years, to recreate a pioneer chemist shop typical of Old Victoria. "This, of course is a very generous offer."

Quite apart from these three projects Friends of the Museum has also taken over responsibility for running the gift shop.

Member in charge is Mrs. D. A. (Edith) Ross, a recent arrival from Vernon, B.C.

Already the shop has taken on a new look. It is better lighted, has some increased space and a much larger stock not only of native Indian work but local handcrafts, color slides of the museum and books and pamphlets on various phases of the history of Victoria and Vancouver Island.

There is also plans to take in a windowed alcove just beyond the shop for a collectors' corner featuring ancient Indian art.

At present gift shop volunteers are being drawn mostly from those organizations affiliated with the "Friends." There is need however, for individuals to volunteer, Mrs. Ross says.

During the tourist season the shop will be open seven days a week, from 10 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. Each day, three shifts of three people will will be needed.

"So you can see we will need extra volunteers, especially those who are really interested in our work and who like to meet the public."

35 Jobs Lost

RUSKIN (CP) — A fire which caused an estimated $90,000 in damages Saturday to the Malakwa Cedar Products shingle and shakes mill in this Fraser Valley community has left 35 men out of work.

Mill owner Donald Lobb said one large building and its contents were destroyed.

Trains Halted

VANCOUVER (CP) — About 85 railway workers, including conductors, trainmen and yardmen, booked off work Sunday to attend a meeting of the United Transport Union in Vancouver, a CP Rail spokesman said.

The spokesman said freight trains failed to move in or out of Vancouver Sunday and only its passenger service — the eastbound Canadian — was not expected to be affected by the work stoppage.

The book-off, similar to others recently which have lasted for 24-hour periods, is believed to be a form of protest by workers to bring attention to a delay in negotiations in the East for a new contract with CP Rail.

A Real Pleasure for Easter Viewing

By HILDA BEASTALL

Less obvious signs of spring growth are as much a source of pleasure as the budding daffodils and tulips. A perennial astonishment for me is the habit of Crown Imperial, Fritillaria imperialis, coming through the soil at the end of February and flowering at a height of three or four feet by Easter.

Hilda

Phenomenal growth to be sure, and a wonder of nature for us to enjoy if we are observant.

The large family of fritillarias seem to be a group midway between the true lilies and the tulips, for some have scaly bulbs like the lilies and others wear tunics like the tulips.

Fritillaria imperialis has a huge scaly bulb, and the stout leafy stems push through the wet soil, unfurling the brightest green as they come. No sign of flowers will develop for a week or so, then suddenly we notice a cluster of green buds at the tip of the leafy stems.

In 10 days the flower buds are seen to be hanging on little outward curved stems beneath a canopy, or "crown" of upstanding leaves.

The buds open to pendant bells of orange red, plain orange, or clear yellow in the several named varieties.

With Easter just five weeks away, we can almost guarantee the flowers to be open by that date, for the growth of this astonishing plant is early or late according to the earliness or lateness of Easter.

The stems bearing the leaves and flowers soon become yellowed and die back completely by mid May, so that any feeding required by well established bulbs must be given during late March and April.

In the summer months the bulbs are dormant.

Planting time for new bulbs would be early fall, for their early spring start means roots are active by the end of September.

Fritillaria imperialis likes to be firmly planted in well drained soil, where it will become established and remain undisturbed for years. The first season or so even the very large bulbs may bear no flowers but will increase in number of leafy stems.

Leave them alone: Don't dig around them or you may cut off a shoot below the surface. Give them a soil of well-rotted compost, leafmold and some dampened peatmoss, with coarse sand if needed for winter drainage. Plant the bulbs with the tops four inches below the surface and leave them alone.

You too will experience perennial wonder as the Crown Imperials begin their upward surge.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	1 ♠	2 ♣	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠.

Against South's three no-trump contract, West opened the king of spades, thus giving declarer an apparent present of a trick. South won this lead with his ace, after which he laid down his queen of diamonds. Upon taking this trick with the ace, West returned his remaining spade, North's queen winning.

After cashing dummy's diamonds, South led a club off the board. East promptly climbed up with his ace, and cashed four spade tricks. Thus declarer was down two. What was declarer's error?

Actually, had declarer been a good guesser, he could have made his contract by electing to attack clubs first, instead of diamonds. If he had done this, East would have won his ace, and would have returned a spade, dummy's queen winning.

West would now have no more spades. When declarer subsequently went after the diamond suit, West would win his ace. Since he had no more spades, there would be no return he could make that would prevent declarer from cashing two spades, one heart, three diamonds and three clubs.

But declarer's shortcoming of not being a good guesser was not his mistake, for he could have made his contract whether he first attacked clubs or diamonds. All he had to do was to allow West's spade king to capture the follows.

West was known to have, at most, two spades, for if he had held the K-x-x, he would have opened the third-highest of partner's suit, not the king. When West would next lead his two, dummy's queen would win.

If diamonds were then attacked, West would take his ace, but he would have no spade to play back. Whatever else he returned, declarer would win, after which he would drive out East's ace of clubs.

If, upon winning the second spade lead with dummy's attack clubs, East would take his ace. Although East could now establish his spade suit by leading it, he could not regain the lead to cash them.

SOLUTION TUESDAY

Window Dressing

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) Window displays of sexy materials would be banned under a proposal by Gov. Nelson Rockefeller.

In a memorandum Friday to the legislature, the Republican governor said that "the public has a right to regulate the public display of such material that offends the sensibilities of many citizens and interferes with the right of privacy at home or in the streets."

In other words, if someone wanted to look at such items, he would have to enter the store.

The bill would apply to materials visible in public places that appeal to prurient interest in sex and depict nudity, sexual conduct or sado-masochistic abuse.

Conviction would carry a punishment of up to a year in jail and a $1,000 fine.

By JOHN SOOSAR

HALIFAX (CP) — John Buchanan, a Halifax lawyer who first entered politics four years ago, was elected on the second ballot at a convention here Saturday as the leader of the Nova Scotia Progressive Conservative party.

Mr. Buchanan, 39, first elected to the provincial legislature in 1967, won Saturday on the second ballot with 391 votes, 45 more than Gerald Doucet, a former education minister.

A third candidate, Roland Thornhill, mayor of neighboring Dartmouth, announced he would support Mr. Buchanan after ending up third on the first ballot with 212 votes.

Mr. Doucet, 33, was leading with 282 votes on the initial ballot while Mr. Buchanan had 242.

Mr. Buchanan, the only Conservative to hold a seat in the eight Halifax ridings when his party was defeated in an October election, said he will be back in the legislature when the spring sitting resumes tonight.

"It will be a big job to follow in the footsteps of Bob Stanfield and Ike Smith," the new leader said.

The convention was called in January after former premier G. I. Smith announced he was resigning because of ill health. He suffered a heart attack while vacationingafter the provincial election which saw the Conservatives defeated after 14 years in office.

Mr. Smith had been premier since 1967 when he succeeded Robert Stanfield, who resigned to run successfully for the national party leadership.

Mr. Smith said in an interview Sunday he feels Mr. Buchanan will make a good leader. He said he would have been satisfied with either of the three candidates.

U.S. Cars Burned

FRANKFURT (Reuters) — Four American military cars went up in flames as a result of magnesium charges attached to the vehicles, police reported. The unoccupied autos, belonging to the criminal investigation division, were destroyed. Damage was estimated at about $8,000.

Huge Soviet Missiles Deployed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator Henry M. Jackson (Dem. Wash.) says his disclosure that Russia is deploying new long-range missiles "points up the need for an over-all agreement with the Soviet Union to limit both offensive and defensive weapons."

The senator's disclosure, supported by the defence department, came Sunday, only a week before U.S. and Soviet negotiators return to the strategic arms limitation talks in Vienna.

It also followed by thee days President Nixon's rejection of a Soviet proposal to reach agreement covering anti-missile defence systems separately from offensive weapons.

This timing led to speculation that the Nnixon administration had fed Jackson information about the new Russian missile development.

Though a Democrat, Jackson agrees with the administration on many defence issues.

The White House declined comment after Jackson said on television: "The Russians are now in the process of deploying a new generation, an advanced generation offensive system."

He spoke of "huge new missiles" superior to and as big or bigger than the giant SS-9 rocket, already considered a powerful threat to the U.S. land-based Minuteman missiles.

Angry Teachers Near B.C. Strike

Rolls Starts Layoffs

LONDON (AP) — The Rolls-Royce Co. announced today a big layoff of workers as the United States and British governments tried to work out the future of the firm's RB-211 jet engine.

Rupert Nicholson, the accountant named to unravel the British firm's financial affairs, said 4,300 employees, many of them white-collar workers, would lose their jobs in the next three weeks.

"The reduction is independent of the RB-211 situation and does not take into account the possible cancellation of the RB-211 program," Nicholson said in a statement.

If the engine—for the American Lockheed Corp.'s TriStar airliner—is scrapped, Rolls Royce's layoffs will be much higher.

The layoffs were ordered at Rolls-Royce plants at Derby and Barnoldswick, England, and at Glasgow, Scotland. The figure represents about 5 per cent of the company's labor force.

REPORT EXPECTED

Nicholson announced the layoffs shortly before Aviation Minister Frederick Corfield was to make his report on prospects of saving the RB-211, whose development costs caused the financial crash which put Rolls-Royce into the hands of a receiver.

Malcolm Muir, Rolls-Royce's aero-engine sales manager in the United States, flew here today from Lockheed's California plant and said the American firm is "moving away from us" over the RB-211.

Muir urged the government to approach Lockheed urgently and "construct an offer which will meet the requirements of the airlines which have ordered the TriStar." Air Canada is one of the airlines.

Muir warned that the airlines, who have been asked to pay more for the TriStar to absorb some of the RB-211's runaway development costs, would not wait for protracted negotiations between Lockheed and the British government on a final price.

"It can only be a matter of hours or at most days before one of the airlines decides it has had enough and then it will be all over," Muir added.

Halifax Dock Idle; Esquimalt Working

Dockyard workers at Halifax went on strike Sunday morning but their Esquimalt counterparts are holding back until March 15.

The dispute involves different pay rates between the two federal dockyards and different raises offered by the treasury board and rejected by the 2,900 workers.

The men, members of the Dockyard Trades and Labor Council, an association of 11 craft unions, gave 75 per cent over-all approval to a strike, although the Esquimalt vote was 63 per cent against. Because it is a national bargaining unit, it is the national vote which counts.

The 1,700 Halifax workers set up picket lines today around the dockyard.

"The fact that the Esquimalt council favored March 15 as a strike date should not be misconstrued as a sign of disunity but merely taken as a request for more time to set up strike machinery," the council said.

Tom Graham, west coast president of the council, said "no comment" when asked to explain why Esquimalt men are continuing work for one week.

Dockyard workers turned down a federal wage offer which would have increased Esquimalt tradesmen rates by 84 cents an hour over two years while increasing Halifax rates 54 cents in the same period.

Tradesmen rate at Esquimalt now is $4.16 an hour compared with $3.31 in Halifax, a difference of 85 cents.

Labor rates were offered an extra 66 cents an hour in Esquimalt and 46 cents an hour at Halifax, over two years. Labor rates now are between $3.29 and $3.50 in Esquimalt and between $2.70 and $2.86 in Halifax.

U.K. Postal Appeal: Delay Mailing Letters

LONDON (AP) — Less than half of Britain's post offices reopened today after the system's workers voted overwhelmingly to end their costly 47-day walkout.

Postal chiefs appealed to the public to hold back all but urgent mail for a few days so they could clear the backlog of 11 million letters, plus another 60 million piled up in foreign countries. They said service might not be back to normal until the end of next week.

(In Victoria, post office officials said word was awaited on lifting of the mail embargo before any mail could be forwarded to the United Kingdom. The go-ahead was expected later this week.)

About 1,000 of the 1,700 main post offices did not reopen today because their staffs had to be trained in the new decimal system for money and stamps that came into effect during the strike. Limited deliveries of first-class mail were expected today, but second-class letters will not be handled until the backlog is cleared.

DECIDES PAY SCALE

International telephone services requiring operator assistance and rural exchanges with operators were expected to be back to normal within a few hours. But all pay phones won't be available until full coin boxes are emptied.

Telegraph service resumes Tuesday.

More than 190,000 of the 205,000 members of the Union of Postal workers voted to go back to work, leaving the fate of their pay demand in the hands of a three-man commission. The vote by union branches was 1,059 to 61.

In the vote, the strikers also agreed to a large-scale overhaul of the postal service to increase its efficiency. Cuts in the daily deliveries and parcel services were reported in the offing.

$100,000 REWARD IN CAPITOL BLAST

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. congressional leaders today offered a $100,000 reward for the arrest and conviction of the person or persons who set off a bomb in the U.S. Capitol last week.

The reward announcement followed a meeting of leaders of the House and Senate to discuss tightening security of the Capitol in wake of the bombing, which heavily damaged several rooms in the Senate wing in the early morning of last Monday.

Mid-East Troops On Alert

Times News Services

Arab and Israeli troops were placed on full alert Sunday night as the seven-month Middle East ceasefire came to an end.

Egypt Sunday moved 100,000 members of its army into position along the Suez Canal to confront the Israeli forces which have occupied the east bank since the 1967 six-day war.

A military spokesman in Tel Aviv said there was no fighting along the 103-mile Suez canal. Journalists were barred from the area, but there were no indications hostilities would resume.

Israel had expressed willingness to extend the truce indefinitely. But Egyptian President Anwar Sadat announced hours before the deadline that his forces no longer would be bound by the ceasefire which first took effect last August. It expired at midnight Sunday night.

Sadat said he had decided not to extend the ceasefire after conferring with Soviet leaders during a secret visit to Moscow last week.

HAS RUSSIAN SUPPORT

"I came back completely satisfied and confident that the Soviet Union supports our cause for liberation and a just peace to the utmost limit," he said in a broadcast.

"We shall no longer be bound by the ceasefire agreement, nor can we pledge to refrain from shooting," Sadat said. "But this does not mean that the guns will be fired tonight or that diplomatic efforts will stop."

The armed forces of Egypt, Jordan and Syria went on alert.

The Egyptian government charged that Israel had deployed new artillery, armor, rocket pads and air force squadrons in the Sinai Desert. Cairo also announced that Egyptian army and air force units had completed 48 hours of manoeuvres with live ammunition.

The Jordan army's chief of operations, Brig. Zeid Ben Shaker, said all his troops and armor were positioned along the Jordan River, the ceasefire line with Israel.

An Israeli source said Syria, which was not included in the truce pact, had moved armored reinforcements into the Golan Heights area on the biggest scale since the 1967 war.

The Israelis said several rockets were fired from Syrian territory at an Israeli collective farm on the heights.

U.S. NOT NEEDED IN NORTH THRUST

WASHINGTON (AP) — State Secretary William P. Rogers said today the United States would not intervene if South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu decided to invade North Vietnam.

"There's no reason, when the South Vietnamese are as strong as they are, why they should be under any restrictions militarily," Rogers said.

He made the statement while reviewing the Indochina situation before the winter conference of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

He did not elaborate.

Jittery Gunman Cancels Hijack

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) A jittery young gunman hijacked a National Airlines jet aircraft today at Mobile, Ala., forced the crew to fly him north toward Montreal, but then decided in flight to surrender.

The FBI took him off without any trouble," said an airlines spokesman after the plane landed in Miami.

The arrest came shortly before noon, or almost three hours after the youth boarded the Boeing 727 at Mobile, ordered 38 passengers and both stewardesses off and demanded to be flown to Canada.

The airlines announced the plane was headed for Montreal. A short time later it was announced that plane had turned around and that the hijacker planned to surrender in Miami.

ARMED WITH PISTOL

The FBI said the youth identified as Thomas Kelly Marston, 26, of Mobile and charged with aircraft piracy, was armed with a 38-calibre pistol.

Authorities said the youth was accompanied to the Mobile airport by an attractive girl. They said the couple started toward the boarding ramp, stopped and appeared to argue and the girl turned and ran through the gate while the youth boarded the plane.

At that point, officials said, he pulled a pistol and forced stewardess Barbara Avery to take him into the cockpit where he demanded that he be flown to Canada.

He permitted everybody but three crew members to get off the plane.

Unless Pensions Changed

A general strike of British Columbia teachers is likely this month unless the provincial government amends its proposed legislation on teachers' pensions.

The British Columbia Teachers' Federation executive will be watching for second reading of the legislation, known as Bill 4, which could come this week.

Les Isaacson, president of the Greater Victoria Teacher's Association said today a meeting of BCTF executive Saturday reaffirmed its resolve to call a strike unless changes are evident in second reading of the bill.

ORIGINAL FORM

If Bill 4 is adopted in its original form, the executive could give final authorization to strike, Isaacson said.

Earlier, teachers voted to give the BCTF executive power to call a strike at any time on the pension issue.

Federation president Jim Killeen said after the meeting:

"We were pleased with the deal offered long-service teachers, but the paltry increases offered our retired teachers are just not good enough."

FIRST READING

Under legislation given first reading last month, retired teachers would get increases ranging from $10.50 to $21 a month.

The 300 delegates at the Saturday meeting also directed that a campaign be undertaken to have teachers indicate their support for the BCTF. The campaign comes in response to proposed amendments to the Public Schools Act, introduced in the legislature by the government a week ago, which would make membership in the federation voluntary instead of automatic.

The federation will also challenge the legality of another amendment which would prevent teachers from running for the office of school trustee.

Janitors Sign Pact

Janitors, tradesmen and grounds staff employed by the Greater Victoria school board voted 66 per cent in favor of a new contract Sunday night.

Alex Markides, a staff representative for the Canadian Union of Public Employees, said today "the threat of a strike is averted." Sunday night's membership meeting followed a full day of negotiations.

He declined to release details of the new agreement until they are presented to the school board tonight.

One week ago, the employees voted 94 per cent to reject a 7.9 per cent wage increase over two years and arrangements for Saturday opening of schools.

QUEBEC ISSUE RAISED AT UBC

Hecklers Halt Turner Speech

VANCOUVER (CP) — About 30 demonstrators protesting the federal government's use of the War Measures Act in last October's terrorist kidnap crisis in Quebec heckled and shouted down Justice Minister John Turner Saturday night at the University of British Columbia.

Turner was delivering a speech as part of the Vancouver institute's weekly UBC lecture series. The topic of the speech he was prevented from making was "violence in modern society."

After the outburst, which included several scuffles between demonstrators and other persons in the audience, Mr. Turner told newsmen he was very disturbed.

"They seem to have replaced logic with slogans ... we've had disruption instead of dialogue," he said.

TURNER
... 'our violent society'

In the text of his speech, released to newsmen earlier, the minister warned Canadians that "we'll have to face the threat of violence for some time in our society."

Later, Turner said: "I've run into a lot of heckling but this is the first time I've ever been prevented from speaking."

He said he wouldn't want to legislate against the kind of demonstration that disrupted the meeting.

"This is a necessary risk of free discussion," he said. "I'm only disappointed that the BIRTH of a new body starts with humble lump of clay at American Motors Corp. Detroit plant. Stylists use a rough wooden frame on which to mould clay outlines of the car they would like to see chosen for new line. They may make dozens before one is picked from which to make new dies. The company announced this week that installations called low-pressure Rheniformers will be built at Vancouver, Richmond, Calif.; Pascagoula, Miss.; El Paso, Tex., and Feluy, Belgium.

MARKET SUMMARIES

Advances Outplay Losses

Mid-day to late trading helped put major exchanges on a plus footing in light to active sessions today.

New York showed over-all modest gains although blue chip issues were mixed. Toronto was up fractionally toward the close, as was Montreal. Vancouver was active.

AT NEW YORK, trading was active.

Many analysts were cautioning that the market was starting out prematurely on a new broad gain. Technicians said the market might not have built a firm enough foundation for a new upward thrust.

NYSE prices included Jones and Laughlin, up 1⅛ at $12⅝; Woolworth, off 1¼ to $51¾; United Aircraft, up 1 at $35⅝; Zenith, up 1⅛ to $47; Alcoa, down 1⅛ to $61½; and Du Pont, down 1¼ at $137.

AT TORONTO, prices were fractionally higher in late trading.

Westcoast Transmission was up ¾ to $24¾, Home A ⅞ to $27⅝, Great West Life ⅝ to $41, Canadian Tire ⅝ to $30 and Bank of Nova Scotia ⅝ to $24⅝.

Calgary Power dropped ⅞ to $26, Thomson Newspapers ½ to $23¼, Kaiser ⅛ to $6 and Beaver Lumber ⅛ to $14½.

AT MONTREAL, prices were slightly stronger in light early-afternoon trading.

Industrials, banks, and the composite were up more than half a point while utilities were unchanged and papers declined.

Metropolitan Stores gained $1⅜ to $36¼, West Coast Transmission ¾ to $24¾, Bank of Nova Scotia ⅝ to $24⅝, Inland Natural Gas ½ to $12¾, Distillers-Seagrams ½ to $52¾, Canada Steamship Line ½ to $31½ and International Nickel ⅜ to $44⅝.

Among declining issues, Weldwood was down ½ to $17½, CPR ½ to $70 and Central-Del Rio ⅛ to $12⅝ after announcement of a second successful gas well in east Alberta's Calling River area.

AT LONDON, the stock market was steady in quiet trading.

Rank Organization was higher with Wall Street and Bats, Decca A, Beechams, AP Cements and Glaxo also moved ahead. Metal Box was sharply lower while Bowaters was firm.

Canadians were irregular. Dome, Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas, Syracuse, Canadian Husky, Canadian Pacific, Hollinger and West Coast Trans were easier, but Pacific Pete, Cominco, Hiram Walker, Algoma and Hawkers firmed.

AT VANCOUVER, prices were down in moderate trading.

Captain International led the industrial issues and was up .12½ at $5.87½ after trading 6,150 shares. Driver Development was down .02 at .36 and George Sparling was up .15 at $2.10.

THE LAST WORD

Julia's Very Own 'Pain Francais'

By Jack Scott

We will now close forever the entire subject of French bread with the final, definitive word on the subject by the one and only Julia Child. Readers who are not interested in making this bread, which takes, at the very least, seven full hours, are kindly asked to tip-toe away and leave us fanatics to our madness. Bye-bye, all.

The magnificent Julia will be seen this coming Wednesday night at eight o'clock on Channel Nine, in her role as The French Chef, giving the second segment of a two-part demonstration of how French bread is made. You'd be a fool to miss it.

The copyright recipe she has sent me from Boston is for the classic, long loaf, Pain Francais, and will make three loaves 16 to 18 inches long and three inches in diameter. Don't be alarmed about the seven-hour schedule. Most of that time is taken up in the three risings that are required. The mixing and kneading should take less than a half hour.

Now, here we go:

Temperature and timing notes: Pick cool, dry days for your first French bread experiments. In order that the dough may develop its characteristic French bread taste and texture, it must triple in volume for each of its three rises. Ideal room temperature for rising is between 70 and 75 degrees. If temperature is lower, the dough will simply take longer to rise.

Scott

For the dough: One package dry-active yeast; one-third cup warm water (100-105) degrees; three and one-half cups (one pound) all-purpose flour, preferably unbleached (measure by dipping dry-measure cups into flour and sweeping off excess); a fairly vertical-sided three to four quart mixing bowl; two-and-one-quarter teaspoons of salt; one and a quarter cups tepid water; a rubber spatula.

Kneading: A wooden or plastic working surface about two feet square; a pastry scraper or stiff spatula.

Final rising of formed loaves: A canvas pastry cloth, available in any household department, or a heavy linen towel; a large baking sheet or tray, 20 by 24 inches.

Baking: About one-half cup corn meal; an unmolding board — a stiff piece of cardboard, a shingle, a piece of plywood, or a baking sheet wrapped in a floured towel—18 inches long and at least four inches wide; your largest baking sheet; a fine-mist spray of some sort, filled with cold water, or a soft brush and cup of cold water.

The dough mixture: Stir the yeast into the one-third cup of water and let dissolve; measure the flour into the mixing bowl, add the salt and the rest of the water. Then stir yeast with spatula until granules have dissolved completely, pour into bowl, and mix vigorously with spatula. Turn out onto working surface and let rest three to four minutes. Meanwhile, wash out bowl, pour in ten and one-half cups tepid water and mark level outside to guide you later when the dough rises. Drain and dry the bowl.

Kneading: Dough should be quite soft and sticky. Start kneading by flipping one side over onto the other with scraper or spatula; continue this movement rapidly for a number of seconds, until dough begins to have enough body so that you can push it with the heel of your hand after flipping. Finally, sweep dough off work surface with scraper and throw it roughly back; flip it over, sweep it up, slap it down and continue, thus, vigorously, until dough feels free of lumps and draws back when pushed out. Let rest again for two minutes. Knead again for a minute or two. Dough should be soft, smooth, elastic and pliable. Scoop into clean bowl and cover airtight with plastic wrap. (You now have approximately three cups of dough; kneading time is eight to 10 minutes.)

First and second risings in bowl: Let rise at a room temperature of between 70 and 75 degrees until dough reaches the ten and one-half cup level marked on the bowl—three to five hours. Lightly flour working surface, and scoop dough onto it. Flatten (patting with the lightly-floured palms of your hands) into a 10 to 12-inch circle. Flip near side over onto far side, then left side onto right, and finally flip near side completely over and just under far side. Clean out bowl, lift dough back into it, cover, and let rise again almost to the previous level—one and a half to two and a half hours, at 70 to 75 degrees.

Forming long loaves and final rise: Scoop dough out onto lightly-floured surface and cut cleanly into three pieces. Flip near edge of each over onto far edge and let rest four to five minutes. One at a time, flatten with lightly-floured palms of hands, patting it left and right into an oval eight or more inches long. Flip near side almost up to far side; flatten again. Always lightly dusting work surface with flour, flip far side almost down over near side. Flatten again. Then, with the heel or the side of your hand, press a trench lengthwise across centre of dough and fold in two by flipping far side down to cover near side. Seal the two edges with the heel of your hand. You now have a fat sausage shape; lengthen it to fit the length of your baking sheet as follows: Place your hands together, palms down, on the centre of the sausage shape; rotate it back and forth under your palms as you slide your hands toward its two ends. Keeping the circumference as even as possible, repeat the movement several times as you roll the dough into as long a sausage as you wish. Rub flour into surface of pastry cloth, and place dough sealed side up (if you can still find the seal) at one side of cloth. Pinch a ridge in cloth to make a trough and room for next piece of dough. Form the other pieces, and lay on the cloth. Cover loosely with a floured towel and let rise to almost triple at 70 to 75 degrees; dough should look puffed and swollen. Time: one and a half to two and a half hours.

Baking: Pre-heat oven to 450 degrees. Sprinkle cornmeal over surface of baking sheet and along edge of unmolding board. One at a time, flip formed dough from canvas to unmolding board and arrange on baking sheet, soft underside of dough on top. Immediately make three lengthwise slashes in the top of the dough with a razor, cutting almost parallel to surface, as follows: first, from one end down a third of the length, just left of centre; second, from upper to lower third, at a slight angle from right to left; third, from lower third to end of loaf, just right of centre. At once, spray surface of loaves with a light film of water and set in lowest level of oven. At minute two, rapidly spray surface again; at minute four, spray again. At minute six, set in upper middle level, and spray a final time. Bake 20 to 25 minutes in all, until loaves are crusty and sound hollow when thumped. Turn off oven and leave five to 10 minutes longer to dry out interior, then remove and stand upright to let air circulate freely around the bread as it cools.

"THEY'RE TRYING TO SMOKE US OUT," says Pat Codyre, who awoke today to the sound of bulldozers piling brush near his home at 1890 Munn Road. Codyre has refused to move from the house since it was expropriated last August by B.C. Hydro, who want to build a Jordan River-Victoria transmission line through the property. Codyre said he and his wife have been without water since a pipe leading to the house was accidentally broken Friday. A pipe leading to the septic tank overflow also was broken. "I'm not blaming the cat drivers," says Codyre. "They're just working men." (Bill Halkett photo.)

Man, 43, Victim Of Inlet

A View Royal man, Bruce Allen, 43, of 109 Burnett, is missing and presumed drowned after his 15-foot runabout was found drifting in Saanich Inlet near McCurdy Point Sunday morning.

Allen, district insulations officer for the B.C. Telephone Co., left Brentwood at 6 a.m. to go fishing.

His boat was spotted about 100 yards offshore, a fishing line still dangling from her stern, about 11 a.m. by Bob Redgrave, 1255 Judge Place, and Barry Jenner, who were returning from a fishing trip in Redgrave's 26-foot cabin cruiser Lazy Gal.

Redgrave said they stopped to investigate when they saw the line over the side and no sign of life aboard the small craft.

TWO OUTBOARDS

"We feel he must have accidentally gone over the side. He'd obviously had engine trouble. There were two outboards on the stern, 60 horse power and 10 horse power. The cover was off the big engine and a sparkplug wrench was in place. Another plug was on the seat. So was a heavy mackinaw.

"There was no fuel line attached to the small motor, so he must have been relying on the larger one for getting him out of there.

"There was a coil of yellow rope attached to an anchor, with the rope leading up to the bow of the boat. He may have tried to go up forward to put out a sea anchor and lost his balance."

When the Lazy Gal reached the runabout Redgrave and his friend could see the fishing line was acting as an anchor.

"All of the line off the reel was gone and it must have caught on the bottom. By the time we got a line on her, though, she was only 25 feet offshore."

HELPED IN SEARCH

They towed the runabout back to Gilbert's marina at Brentwood and went out again Sunday afternoon to help in the search.

Originally from Nova Scotia, Allen is described by friends as being an experienced outdoorsman and sportsman.

Glynn Jones of B.C. Tel said today, "Bruce was no rookie. He's been around boats all his life. He was a great hunter, fisherman and curler."

Allen is married and has two boys living at home and an older daughter in Edmonton.

'Lock-Up' Ordered For 17-Year-Old

A 17-year-old youth charged with the attempted murder of a two-year-old girl was remanded in custody for the statutory eight-day period when he appeared this morning in provincial court.

Judge William Ostler, who noted that the legal status of 17-year-olds is still "a matter of uncertainty" in British Columbia, ordered the youth detained in a "lock-up" until his next appearance March 16.

He said he was aware of legal uncertainty as to whether a 17-year-old was a child or an adult in the eyes of the law.

The uncertainty arose Jan. 29 when Judge John Anderson of Vancouver provincial court ruled that 17-year-olds should be heard in juvenile or family courts, not in adult courts.

'SUCH GRAVITY'

This threw out a federal law of last year transferring youths of that age to the jurisdiction of adult courts.

"If the accused is an adult, no problem exists," Ostler said.

He said, however, that because "the crime charged is one of such gravity" he could not justify releasing the accused in his own recognizance.

Ostler also said the youth "can't safely be confined" in a detention home for children because of his age and the nature of the charge against him.

But he said an application for either cash or surety bail would be considered as soon as the youth had obtained counsel.

LEGAL AID

Ostler asked that proceedings to obtain legal aid for the youth be continued until such time as the prosecution was notified that a lawyer had been hired privately.

The youth, charged Friday with trying to murder Fiona Fay Boucher, made a brief appearance in provincial court Saturday morning and was remanded to this morning by Judge Harold Alder.

FIRST TIME

The remand was the first time since Jan. 29 that the court has assumed jurisdiction over a 17-year-old.

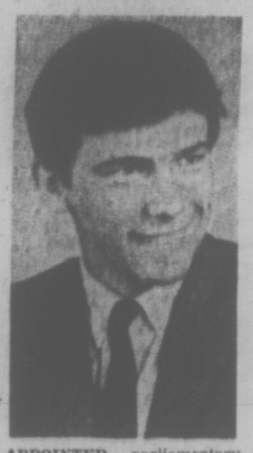
Ostler noted that "prosecutors have consistently requested and received adjournments" in cases involving 17-year-olds.

All other 17-year-olds have been remanded and released in their own recognizance pending the outcome of a Supreme Court case to determine their legal status.

Meanwhile the judge originally scheduled to hear the case in Vancouver, Feb. 26, will not hear it until next Friday. The judge's ruling is not expected until March 19 or later.

The Boucher child, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Boucher, 643 John, was found early Friday morning lying in a pool of blood in a bathroom shared by tenants in the house where she lives.

She is undergoing treatment at Royal Jubilee Hospital for a skull-fracture.



APPOINTED parliamentary intern today was Jack MacDonald 24, of Victoria. MacDonald was one of 10 appointed from 187 applicants. Recently studying for his doctorate at Yale, he will work with members of the Commons and its senior staff beginning Sept. 1. Interns are paid a non-taxable $6,000 for the 10-month period. MacDonald is the son of Queen's Printer Ken MacDonald.

Saanich Rejects Joint Negotiating

Saanich has turned down an offer made by Victoria council to form a single bargaining unit to negotiate civic employee union contracts.

A letter arrived at city hall today, signed by the Saanich municipal clerk, saying simply that "Saanich municipal council is of the opinion that there are certain advantages to negotiate separately as at present and therefore does not wish to participate in joint negotiations."

Told of the letter, Mayor Courtney Haddock expressed disappointment.

"It seems to me that advantages outnumber the disadvantages. Well, we tried in the city."

Ald. Peter Pollen, who had pushed for joint negotiations, said: "I am bitterly disappointed in that the municipality of Saanich, with its outstanding municipal leader, should take such a very short-sighted attitude towards this urgently required negotiating process.

"The advantages expressed by Saanich completely escape me."

24-Hour Pickets Set for Hospital

Round-the-clock picketing is planned to shut down the Sandringham Private Hospital "if necessary" to bring a five-month strike to an end, the president of the Canadian Union of Public Employees said today.

Stan Little of Ottawa said if such action causes inconvenience to patients "they should point their finger at the employer."

Little was in Victoria Sunday to meet the women who have been walking the picket line in front of the hospital since Sept. 30. He also addressed officials of the Victoria Labor Council.

"We have to start making the strike sufficiently inconvenient for the employer so that he'll be forced to bargain with us," Little said.

"This man has decided to act in an irresponsible manner — he has refused to recognize the basic concept of collective bargaining, and the public couldn't care less.

"Turning the clock back 25 years is not the answer."

Little was appalled the strike had lasted for five months without a settlement. He admitted he had not been fully informed about the Sandringham situation until he arrived here.

Round-the-clock picketing now is seen as the only way of preventing supplies, particularly fuel for heat, from being delivered to the hospital, Little said.

Local CUPE representative Tom Smith said the stepped-up picketing could be accomplished with volunteers from local unions. He could not say when it would begin.

Fund Lack Threatens Indian Legal Aid

Lack of funds could end the career of Canada's first Indian court worker after only 12 months on the job in Victoria.

If the pilot project initiated by the John Howard Society is allowed to die it will mean the Indians in trouble with the law won't get specialized counselling services.

Grants from the federal department of Indian affairs and northern development and the provincial First Citizen's Fund made it possible for the John Howard Society of Vancouver Island to hire a court worker in February, 1970.

But the grants will soon run out, and there has been no indication from either federal or provincial sources whether they will be renewed.

Mike Bennett, executive director of the John Howard Society, explained that in creating the position the society was acting in response to the $66,000 Canadian Corrections Association report, The Indian and the Law, which reported lack of formal education and different cultural background prevent Indians from asserting their rights when they are brought in contact with law enforcement agencies.

John Joe, 25, the man the society hired a year ago, has been praised by judges and police officers since he began attending provincial court to give advice to Indians who are to make court appearances.

He also helps out in obtaining bail, legal aid, presentence reports, clothing, money, housing or by referring people to other agencies.

"As far as the attitude of court officials goes, they believe this is something that's overdue," Joe said.

He said there is a tremendous need for court workers elsewhere in B.C., especially in isolated areas were all law enforcement agencies are vested in one man, the local RCMP officer.

He'd like to see wider use of the suspended sentence and probation rather than jail sentences, particularly for liquor offences.

JOE
. . . something overdue

Some Indians prefer to plead guilty in court because they believe they will receive a lesser punishment than if they attempt to fight the charge.

"I don't think this is something that's peculiar to the Indian people. Ignorance of the courts is pretty widespread — it's just more prevalent among the Indian people."

A survey conducted by the John Howard Society in 1967 revealed Indians make up 15 per cent of the population of the Island's four major penal institutions (William Head) Vancouver Island unit, and Lakeview and Snowdon forestry camps), although they constitute only three per cent of the population at large on the Island.

In a brief submitted to the federal government in November, 1970, the society indicated it is willing to assume responsibility for training of court workers to work in other parts of the province if money is made available.

Estimated minimum cost of maintaining the current pilot project for another year is $11,752, as outlined in another brief submitted in November to the First Citizen's Fund, which is under the jurisdiction of the minister of municipal affairs.

A statement from that brief, which was written by H. B. Dick, the chairman of the society's Indian counsellor project, underlines the importance of maintaining it:

"The discontinuation of the project at this time would not only mean the waste of valuable training time and potential of a competent counsellor, but also the confidence of the Indian people that their rights are held to be as important as those of other citizens; that services exist which are designed to meet their special needs."

Canada Airborne For Sovereignty

By WALTER McKINNON

"When you're up to your ass in alligators, it is difficult to remind yourself your initial objective was to drain the swamp."

That cynical epigram is currently Mike Taylor's favorite saying, perhaps because it reflects so well the frustrations and contradictions of a professional military man in a peacetime role.

Taylor is 29 years old, a crisply competent, conscientious soldier. He has been in the Royal Canadian Air Force and now the Canadian Armed Forces for 13 years, for the past three of them a captain. He takes his job seriously.

At specified intervals, Taylor, as crew commander of Flight Six, 407 Squadron, Canadian Forces Base Comox, takes command of a four-engined Argus aircraft, 157,000 pounds of sophisticated electronics, highly volatile fuel and flying machine, and with 14 other professional young men takes off in search of an intangible.

Capt. Taylor and his crew, when they are not patrolling Canada's west coast in anti-submarine operations, cover the vastness of the northland in pursuit of that political dream called Arctic sovereignty.

For a professional warrior such a task must be frustrating. He has been trained to achieve objectives. When an searching for an intangible

intangible is his objective he can never know whether or not he has been successful.

The quest of Taylor and his companions in 407 Squadron is not a new one — Samuel Hearne in 1771 crossed the Canadian Arctic from Churchill to the mouth of the Coppermine in seach of that same will o' the wisp.

In recent years, however, advanced science and technology have turned it into a vital nationalistic and political issue, by demonstrating the potential wealth of the North.

And Canada, with the largest territorial area in the Arctic, has the biggest stake in the game. Territorial sovereignty traditionally is based on occupation and control. Canada, therefore, is showing the flag in the Arctic to demonstrate control.

Sovereignty flights such as Taylor and his crew carry out are not new — Canadian military aircraft have been patrolling the Arctic for several years.

But last week, for the first time, the press accompanied the Comox flight.

The objectives of these flights were spelled out by Lt.-Commander Dan Desko, the United States Navy officer attached to 407 Squadron on an exchange basis as operations officer.

"We are interested in everything that goes on up there," he stressed. Oil exploration, pollution, new settlements and native movements, even the migratory patterns of animals in the Arctic come under scrutiny of the Argue crew on patrol.

Anti-submarine patrol in the Arctic Ocean has also in recent years become a vital function of the armed forces. Since the United States submarine Nautilus in August of 1958 became the first vessel to cross the North Pole under the ice, Canada has been aware of submarine activity in that area.

Canada is in the North as a military presence, Desko explained, because it has to be pollution, new settlements

and "we want the rest of the world to know we are there."

To facilitate its primary role in anti-submarine patrol, the Argus is equipped with elaborate electronic sensors, some of which are even capable of detecting a submarine sailing under the Arctic pack ice.

The Argus itself is an impressive weapon. Canadian built and in use for well over a decade, it is powered by four engines, each capable of delivering a maximum 3,700 horsepower to push the 128-foot airframe to a cruising speed of approximately 200 knots.

It has a wingspan of 142 feet, three inches, and remarkable manoeuvrability for an aircraft of its size.

It regularly carries a crew of three pilots, 10 radio-navigators and two flight engineers.

They were on hand the morning of the mission for a 5 a.m. briefing, aircraft boarding at approximately 6:20 a.m. for takeoff at 7 a.m.

Forty minutes from takeoff the routine vanished when an alert crew member smelled fuel fumes. Taylor and his crew reacted instantly, shutting down the furnaces which heat the aircraft and prevent icing of wing surfaces. All equipment which could cause sparks was shut down and the flight engineers and safety officer began the hunt for the problem.

emergency in the air

It was quickly located — a cracked fuel line allowing raw high-octane gasoline to flow into the bomb bays.

At that point the situation became an emergency. All potential fire hazards ewere eliminated and Taylor pushed his plane up to 13,000 feet for a fast return to Comox "over the Rocks," as they call the rugged coastal mountains.

The decision to abort the mission was made at Ashcroft, in the B.C. interior and the return was in a direct line, straight across some of the highest peaks in the province.

Safely across the mountains and over the sea between Vancouver Island and the mainland, Taylor eased his plane down to 3,000 feet for a fuel dump, essential for a safe landing back at Comox.

In six minutes 2,200 gallons of fuel poured from the tanks into the atmosphere. It wasn't water pollution, however. Dumped at an altitude of 3,000 feet the fuel had all evaporated before it reached the ground.

Taylor estimated he had poured $500 worth of fuel into the atmosphere but "We don't take chances when it comes to the safety of our crew."

The fire trucks were on the runway when the giant Argus touched down but according to Taylor later it was just a routine precaution. "They like to come out for these things because it's the only chance they ever get to use their sirens."

Twenty-four hours later the same crew and the same aircraft were airborne again on the same mission, but the press contingent had been reduced from three to two.

The actual mission was an anticlimax — close to 20 hours in the air, 3,600 miles on patrol from Canada's southern extremity to the Arctic Ocean and back, routine, monotonous and within the structure of its defined objectives, a complete success.

moose, wolf shown the flag

It flew from Comox to Vancouver, up the Fraser River to the interior plateaus, over the Peace River flatlands and northern Alberta into the Northwest Territories.

North of the 60th parallel Taylor dropped to altitudes as low as 100 feet from the ground and rarely higher than 500, to begin his northern patrol.

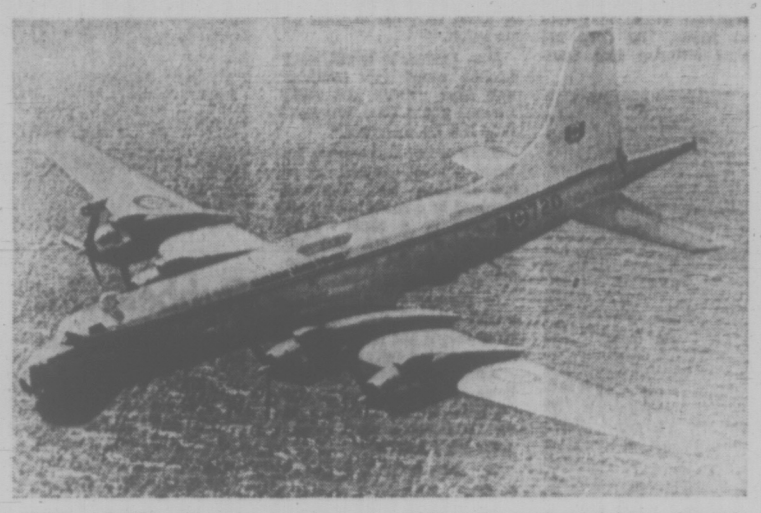
It showed the flag to countless moose, at least one wolf, two natives with dog teams, a significant part of the populations of Norman Wells, Arctic Red River and Inuvik, and a three-man oil crew.

And that was its objective.

Spectacular was the flight up the Mackenzie, 600 miles of flying at altitudes so low that animal tracks were clearly visible in the snowy surface of Canada's largest river.

At Inuvik in the Mackenzie Delta, almost on the Arctic Ocean, Taylor lifted the plane to a slightly higher altitude, made a pass for the benefit of the press and turned for the long trip home to a midnight landing in Comox.

The flag had been waved again.



THE ARGUS, Canada's airborne submarine warfare weapon and a complex electronic detection laboratory, has been in use since the mid-1950s. It is to be retired by the middle of this decade but its replacement has not yet been selected.

OUR TRUE NORTH IN 'U.S.' HANDS

Times Staff

Consider the paradox that is Dan Desko.

A career military man, father of two, possessed of a glib turn of phrase and the mien of a Carnegie course graduate, Desko has recently been assigned as operations officer, Canadian Forces 407 Squadron based at Comox.

That squadron is charged with responsibility for showing the Maple Leaf in the North, declaring Canada's sovereignty in the Arctic.

Dan Desko, 34 years old, is a United States citizen and in active service as a lieutenant-commander in the United States Navy.

An American officer involved in such a purely nationalistic endeavor as declaring and maintaining Canada's Arctic sovereignty?

This anomaly underscores the unique and often uncomfortably complicated position Canada occupies in the defensive structure of the North American continent, committed to and largely dependent upon the massive, albeit benevolent, presence south of the border.

Lt.-Commander Desko, USN, is an exchange officer, one of hundreds attached on an active basis to Canadian military operations. And in the United States there are a like number of Canadian military men filling equally vital posts in that nation's armed forces.

Desko is quick to recognize the incongruity of a situation which places a foreign national in a key slot in Canada's struggle to declare itself sovereign in the Arctic. But he seems almost hypersensitive about it (he declined to have his picture taken) and would rather Canadians were unaware of it.

He suggests it is a matter of coincidence.

"My position in this squadron is that I am not temporary or any kind of a visiting member of a foreign country or anything else ... I am assigned directly, as any other Canadian officer, under control of the commanding officer on exchange duty and this is by agreement of our governments," he says.

"I wear a different color of uniform simply because of the place where some little stork chose to drop me and that is as simple as that," he adds a moment later.

Prior to becoming operations officer for 407 Squadron Desko was in a potentially even more anomalous situation, as crew captain of an Argus aircraft, actually leading Canadian sovereignty missions himself.

"It so happens the reason I got this particular job was purely coincidental," he says. "Seniority-wise, the squadron had a deficiency ... and the next man down the line who was due for a shore job in the squadron with the rank required was this officer and I was assigned. Simple as that."

Desko goes to some length to make clear there are no sinister overtones implicit in his presence at Canadian Forces Base Comox.

"There is one aspect I would like you to be aware of and that is I do not encroach in any way upon the policy of Canadian sovereignty. There are things I know exist in any military that are purely national and not for foreign release and I do not see anything of this nature."

Sinister or not, simple coincidence or not, it remains an anomaly — an American naval officer is vitally involved in Canada's struggle to declare northern sovereignty.

And he's on our side.

Mackenzie Top-Rated Sub Killer

The West Coast's most efficient submarine killer is resting on her laurels after earning cock o' the walk status in the Esquimalt-based fleet.

She's captured the Murray Efficiency Trophy, the squadron communication trophy, the squadron efficiency trophy, and is runner-up for the sonar proficiency field.

The destroyer-escort HMCS Mackenzie is refitting in the dockyard of CFB, Esquimalt, and scheduled to be ready for sea duty again in mid-May.

Her captain, Cmdr. Gordon Armstrong, declined to take credit for his ship's prowess.

"I'm a newcomer here. I had nothing to do with winning the trophies," he said.

Armstrong took over command in late January from Cmdr. R. L. McClean, who is now armed forces co-ordinator for the B.C. centennial celebrations.

But Armstrong said some of the key personnel aboard Mackenzie when she earned her laurels are still serving in her and Mackenzie will be again working for top position when she resumes duties.

The trophies are awarded after ships have engaged in a series of exercise situations with the scoring based on the ship's average.

Mackenzie's date for refit completion may be altered if the threatened strike by dockyard workers materializes.

Shepherd Judged Best Dog

Judged best Canadian-bred was a Schipperke, Can. Am. Ch. Roetmop Lucifer, owned by Marjorie Kuyt of Langley.

Best Canadian-bred puppy was a Standard Poodle, Mirdinon Antoinette, owned by Mr. and Mrs. F. A. E. Manning of Victoria.

Judges for the shows, held Friday to Sunday at Sanscha Hall in Sidney, were Mrs. Edna Joel of Islington, Ont.; Mrs. Irene Khatoonian of Sacramento, Calif.; Mrs. Stewart Makley of Seattle; William Brennan of Victoria; George Donaldson of Saanichton, and Lt.-Cmdr. D. G. Anderson of Victoria.

Friday's show winner, with an entry of 268, was an Afghan, Can. Am. Ch. Tajma's Lluvva Bhoi of Zardonx, owned by Owen and Marie Winston of Coupeville, Wash.

Saturday's entry was 364 dogs and the show winner was an American Cocker Spaniel, Can. Am. Ch. Ramrod Sherman, owned by Wynn Bloch of Bellevue, Wash.

Best of the 67 entries in the puppy sweepstakes Saturday morning was a St. Bernard, Diana V Hochkreuz, owned by Mrs. Betty-Anne Hicks of North Vancouver.

Accidents Kill 3 On Weekend

By The Canadian Press

At least three persons died accidentally in British Columbia during the weekend, all of them in traffic accidents.

An unidentified middle-aged man was struck by a car and killed in Fort George near Prince George in the interior of the province Sunday. Police were searching for a car that left the scene.

Leonard Dale Currie, 22, of Nelson was found dead in his wrecked car Saturday two miles east of Nelson. A passenger in the car was taken to hospital after the wreck was discovered by hitchhikers.

In Vancouver, an East Vancouver man was killed in a two-car collision Sunday night in the south Vancouver area. Police identified the victim as Michael Hrycenko, 43. His wife and two children were in hospital with minor injuries.

Tattoo to Mark 80th Anniversary Of Highlanders

The 80th anniversary of the 48th Highlanders of Canada will be highlighted by a full-scale military tattoo in Maple Leaf Gardens at a regimental reunion in Toronto the last weekend in May.

Chairman of the reunion, Lt.-Col. M. E. George, a former commanding officer of the regiment, said "we are looking for participation by former 48th Highlanders from across the country."

He said those planning to attend should write to Sgt. Jimmy Brannan, in charge of registration at the 48th Highlanders of Canada Association, 519 Church Street, Toronto.

Construction Up On Peninsula

Saanich Peninsula building permits for January and February this year total $1,263,720, compared to $904,795 for the same period last year.

Central Saanich leads the way with permits issued for $553,000 ($309,537 in 1970). January figures are $199,800 and February $353,200.

Building inspector Jim Horel says that most of the new buildings are individually-contracted homes. Central Saanich is rapidly running out of regular size residential lots and the half-acre minimum imposed on land throughout the residential zone says Horel is curtailing subdivision development.

North Saanich figures shows considerable commerical development this year. Building permits in January total $63,634 but in February, the figure $266,176 includes plans for a marina and golf club.

The total $329,810 is, however, slightly less than the 1970 figure of $360,656.

Sidney has issued permits for 20 new houses this year and, with some commercial construction, the figures total $370,910, an increase over the 1970 figure of $348,441. January shows $181,680 worth of construction and February $189,220.

Therapists May Form Counselling Institute

The proliferation of therapy groups locally has led a number of people in the field to try to bring all together in a new institute of counselling and psychotherapy.

Dr. Phillip Ney, a child psychiatrist, and Dr. Otfried Spreen, a psychology professor at the University of Victoria, suggest such an institute could have three objectives:

● By including the various professions and some of the lay groups involved, gain mutual benefit through sharing ideas and experience.

● Provide a basis for training people who don't feel they have sufficient training for the jobs they are expected to do.

● Provide the public with a registry of people who are competent to do various kinds of counselling.

Ney said a series of lectures is being arranged for later this month. Everybody working in the counselling or therapy field or interested in it will be invited to come along. The meetings will deal with what's happening in the field and will attempt to measure the wants of those attending.

One of the problems to be dealt with is the number of groups which have sprung up. Ney said in some cases some people unintentionally may be doing more harm than good.

Arcari Holds Welter Title

ROME (Reuter) — Bruno Arcari of Italy survived severe eye cuts and a tremendous last-minute onslaught from Brazilian challenger Joao Henrique to retain his world junior welterweight boxing title here Saturday night.

The 29-year-old champion ended the fight smiling through a mass of blood after boxing with coolness and power against the young Brazilian.

Although the southpaw champion was unable to produce a knockout punch, his strong left hook hammered into Henrique's face throughout the fight.

CANUCKS GET GAME SWITCH

MONTREAL (CP) — Vancouver Canucks will get a brief rest next week after a 10-day road trip because the National Hockey League has rescheduled a game with Detroit Red Wings to Thursday from Wednesday.

An NHL spokesman said Vancouver had requested the change after a visit with Montreal Canadiens was postponed Thursday due to a vicious snowstorm and rescheduled for Tuesday.

The Canucks had faced the unhappy prospect of playing Montreal Tuesday and flying 3000 miles to play Detroit at home the next night.

Best Cycle Ride Comes From Hyde

Terry Hyde, driving a 400 cc Husqvarna, was in sweeping form Sunday to emerge as overall winner in a Victoria Motorcycle Club cross-country race, the first event of a spring series.

Hyde won all four heats in competition on the club's Happy Valley Road grounds.

Martin Spriggs placed second overall, followed by Al Barclay and Rick Russell.

Ottawa Hockey Great Succumbs

OTTAWA (CP) — Funeral services were held today for Harold (Punch) Broadbent, a member of the Hockey Hall of Fame and last surviving member of one of the all-time great National Hockey League forward lines, who died Saturday. He was 78.

He played right wing on the line of Frank Nighbor and Cy Denneny that led Ottawa Senators to three straight Stanley Cup championships. He was named to the Hall of Fame in 1962.

MANAGER RESIGNING

WOLFVILLE, N.S. (CP) — Gus McFarland of Sackville, N.S., says he is resigning as manager of Canada's national basketball team.

War Air Ace Dies At 69

MONTREAL (CP) — Gordon Roy McGregor, 69, former president of Air Canada and wartime fighter ace in the Battle of Britain, died today.

A spokesman for Air Canada said Mr. McGregor died in Montreal General Hospital following a short illness.

Mr. McGregor, who after the second World War became one of the youngest presidents of any major airline, piloted Trans-Canada Air Lines—later Air Canada—into the jet age and to international renown among world carriers.

But it was as "Old Gordon" that he first won fame in the early days of the war when the guns of his Hurricane accounted for many enemy aircraft in the Battle of Britain.

At 38, he was for a time the oldest fighter pilot in the Battle of Britain and he was still "operational" in combat at the age of 44.

RETIRED IN 1968

"G. R." stepped down as Air Canada president May 31, 1968, 1½ years beyond the normal retirement age, after 20 years at the controls of the airline when it stepped to the threshold of the supersonic era.

Mr. McGregor, a native of Montreal, is survived by his wife, the former Alexandra May Ramsay, the Montreal girl he married in 1928. They had no children.

Uvic Student Heads Council Of Young Drivers

Paul Hadfield, 210—909 Pendergast Street, was elected executive member for B.C.-Alberta by the Canada Council of Young Drivers during a recent meeting in Montreal.

Paul, a third-year economics student at the University of Victoria, has been active in CCYD activities for several years and has been serving as chairman of the driver education committee.

The Canada Council of Young Drivers is a national organization of young people who work to promote a greater awareness of traffic safety among young people. CCYD is sponsored by the Insurance Bureau of Canada.

Channel 10 Airs Debate Tonight

A panel discussion on the church and the community will be held this evening at 9:30 over Channel 10 cablevision.

Taking part will be Rev. Norman Archer, Rev. Grahame Baker, Rev. Bruce Molloy, and Rev. Michael O'Connell. The panel is sponsored by the Victoria Council of Churches.

Questions on the role of the church — should it confine its activities to the Sunday service or should it be involved in all the struggles of the human race — will be discussed.

Odd Job Phone

A story in the Times Saturday edition incorrectly reported the phone number of Victoria Youth Industries Ltd. as 385-5743. The correct number is 388-5743.

Youth Industries had been formed as a company by the Victoria Low Income Group to provide odd jobs of all sorts mainly for unemployed heads of families.

Rolls Starts Layoffs

LONDON (AP) — The Rolls-Royce Co. announced today a big layoff of workers as the United States and British governments tried to work out the future of the firm's RB-211 jet engine.

Rupert Nicholson, the accountant named to unravel the British firm's financial affairs, said 4,300 employees, many of them white-collar workers, would lose their jobs in the next three weeks.

"The reduction is independent of the RB-211 situation and does not take into account the possible cancellation of the RB-211 program," Nicholson said in a statement.

If the engine—for the American Lockheed Corp.'s TriStar airliner—is scrapped, Rolls Royce's layoffs will be much higher.

The layoffs were ordered at Rolls-Royce plants at Derby and Barnoldswick, England, and at Glasgow, Scotland. The figure represents about 5 per cent of the company's labor force.

REPORT EXPECTED

Nicholson announced the layoffs shortly before Aviation Minister Frederick Corfield was to make his report on prospects of saving the RB-211, whose development costs caused the financial crash which put Rolls-Royce into the hands of a receiver.

Malcolm Muir, Rolls-Royce's aero-engine sales manager in the United States, flew here today from Lockheed's California plant and said the American firm is "moving away from us" over the RB-211.

Muir urged the government to approach Lockheed urgently and "construct an offer which will meet the requirements of the airlines which have ordered the TriStar." Air Canada is one of the airlines.

Muir warned that the airlines, who have been asked to pay more for the TriStar to absorb some of the RB-211's runaway development costs, would not wait for protracted negotiations between Lockheed and the British government on a final price.

"It can only be a matter of hours or at most days before one of the airlines decides it has had enough and then it will be all over," Muir added.

Halifax Dock Idle; Esquimalt Working

Dockyard workers at Halifax went on strike Sunday morning but their Esquimalt counterparts are holding back until March 15.

The dispute involves different pay rates between the two federal dockyards and different raises offered by the treasury board and rejected by the 2,900 workers.

The men, members of the Dockyard Trades and Labor Council, an association of 11 craft unions, gave 75 per cent over-all approval to a strike, although the Esquimalt vote was 63 per cent against. Because it is a national bargaining unit, it is the national vote which counts.

The 1,700 Halifax workers set up picket lines today around the dockyard.

"The fact that the Esquimalt council favored March 15 as a strike date should not be misconstrued as a sign of disunity but merely taken as a request for more time to set up strike machinery," the council said.

Tom Graham, west coast president of the council, said "no comment" when asked to explain why Esquimalt men are continuing work for one week.

Dockyard workers turned down a federal wage offer which would have increased Esquimalt tradesmen rates by 84 cents an hour over two years while increasing Halifax rates 54 cents in the same period.

Tradesmen rate at Esquimalt now is $4.16 an hour compared with $3.31 in Halifax, a difference of 85 cents.

Labor rates were offered an extra 66 cents an hour in Esquimalt and 46 cents an hour at Halifax, over two years. Labor rates now are between $3.29 and $3.50 in Esquimalt and between $2.70 and $2.86 in Halifax.

U.K. Postal Appeal: Delay Mailing Letters

LONDON (AP) — Less than half of Britain's post offices reopened today after the system's workers voted overwhelmingly to end their costly 47-day walkout.

Postal chiefs appealed to the public to hold back all but urgent mail for a few days so they could clear the backlog of 11 million letters, plus another 60 million piled up in foreign countries. They said service might not be back to normal until the end of next week.

(In Victoria, post office officials said word was awaited on lifting of the mail embargo before any mail could be forwarded to the United Kingdom. The go-ahead was expected later this week.)

About 1,000 of the 1,700 main post offices did not reopen today because their staffs had to be trained in the new decimal system for money and stamps that came into effect during the strike. Limited deliveries of first-class mail were expected today, but second-class letters will not be handled until the backlog is cleared.

International telephone services requiring operator assistance and rural exchanges with operators were expected to be back to normal within a few hours. But all pay phones won't be available until full coin boxes are emptied.

Telegraph service resumes Tuesday.

More than 190,000 of the 205,000 members of the Union of Postal workers voted to go back to work, leaving the fate of their pay demand in the hands of a three-man commission. The vote by union branches was 1,059 to 61.

In the vote, the strikers also agreed to a large-scale overhaul of the postal service to increase its efficiency. Cuts in the daily deliveries and parcel services were reported in the offing.

Mid-East Troops On Alert

Times News Services

Arab and Israeli troops were placed on full alert Sunday night as the seven-month Middle East ceasefire came to an end.

Egypt Sunday moved 100,000 members of its army into position along the Suez Canal to confront the Israeli forces which have occupied the east bank since the 1967 six-day war.

A military spokesman in Tel Aviv said there was no fighting along the 103-mile Suez canal. Journalists were barred from the area, but there were no indications hostilities would resume.

Israel had expressed willingness to extend the truce indefinitely. But Egyptian President Anwar Sadat announced hours before the deadline that his forces no longer would be bound by the ceasefire which first took effect last August. It expired at midnight Sunday night.

Sadat said he had decided not to extend the ceasefire after conferring with Soviet leaders during a secret visit to Moscow last week.

HAS RUSSIAN SUPPORT

"I came back completely satisfied and confident that the Soviet Union supports our cause for liberation and a just peace to the utmost limit," he said in a broadcast.

"We shall no longer be bound by the ceasefire agreement, nor can we pledge to refrain from shooting," Sadat said. "But this does not mean that the guns will be fired tonight or that diplomatic efforts will stop."

The armed forces of Egypt, Jordan and Syria went on alert.

The Egyptian government charged that Israel had deployed new artillery, armor, rocket pads and air force squadrons in the Sinai Desert. Cairo also announced that Egyptian army and air force units had completed 48 hours of manoeuvres with live ammunition.

The Jordan army's chief of operations, Brig. Zeid Ben Shaker, said all his troops and armor were positioned along the Jordan River, the ceasefire line with Israel.

An Israeli source said Syria, which was not included in the truce pact, had moved armored reinforcements into the Golan Heights area on the biggest scale since the 1967 war.

The Israelis said several rockets were fired from Syrian territory at an Israeli collective farm on the heights

U.S. NOT NEEDED IN NORTH THRUST

WASHINGTON (AP) — State Secretary William P. Rogers said today the United States would not intervene if South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu decided to invade North Vietnam.

"There's no reason, when the South Vietnamese are as strong as they are, why they should be under any restrictions militarily," Rogers said.

He made the statement while reviewing the Indochina situation before the winter conference of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

He did not elaborate.

Jittery Gunman Cancels Hijack

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) A jittery young gunman hijacked a National Airlines jet aircraft today at Mobile, Ala., forced the crew to fly him north toward Montreal, but then decided in flight to surrender.

"The FBI took him off without any trouble," said an airlines spokesman after the plane landed in Miami.

The arrest came shortly before noon, or almost three hours after the youth boarded the Boeing 727 at Mobile, ordered 38 passengers and four stewardesses off and demanded to be flown to Canada.

The airlines announced the plane was headed for Montreal. A short time later it was announced that plane had turned around and that the hijacker planned to surrender in Miami.

ARMED WITH PISTOL

The FBI said the youth identified as Thomas Kelly Marston, 16, of Mobile and charged with aircraft piracy, was armed with a .38-calibre pistol.

Authorities said the youth was accompanied to the Mobile airport by an attractive girl. They said the couple started toward the boarding ramp, stopped and appeared to argue and the girl turned and ran through the gate while the youth boarded the plane.

At that point, officials said, he pulled a pistol and forced stewardess Barbara Avery to take him into the cockpit where he demanded that he be flown to Canada.

He permitted everybody but three crew members to get off the plane.

Unless Pensions Changed

A general strike of British Columbia teachers is likely this month unless the provincial government amends its proposed legislation on teachers' pensions.

The British Columbia Teachers Federation executive will be watching for second reading of the legislation, known as Bill 4, which could come this week.

Les Isaacson, president of the Greater Victoria Teacher's Association said today a meeting of BCTF executive Saturday reaffirmed its resolve to call a strike unless changes are evident in second reading of the bill.

ORIGINAL FORM

If Bill 4 is adopted in its original form, the executive could give final authorization to strike, Isaacson said.

Earlier, teachers voted to give the BCTF executive power to call a strike at any time on the pension issue.

Federation president Jim Killeen said after the meeting:

"We were pleased with the deal offered long-service teachers, but the paltry increases offered our retired teachers are just not good enough."

FIRST READING

Under legislation given first reading last month retired teachers would get increases ranging from $10.50 to $21 a month.

The 200 delegates at the Saturday meeting also directed that a campaign be undertaken to have teachers indicate their support for the BCTF. The campaign comes in response to proposed amendments to the Public Schools Act, introduced in the legislature by the government a week ago, which would make membership in the federation voluntary instead of automatic.

The federation will also challenge the legality of another amendment which would prevent teachers from running for the office of school trustee.

Janitors Sign Pact

Janitors, tradesmen and grounds staff employed by the Greater Victoria school board voted 66 per cent in favor of a new contract Sunday night.

Alex Markides, a staff representative for the Canadian Union of Public Employees, said today "the threat of a strike is averted." Sunday night's membership meeting followed a full day of negotiations.

He declined to release details of the new agreement until they are presented to the school board tonight.

One week ago, the employees voted 94 per cent to reject a 7.9 per cent wage increase over two years and arrangements for Saturday opening of schools.

QUEBEC ISSUE RAISED AT UBC

Hecklers Halt Turner Speech

VANCOUVER (CP) — About 30 demonstrators protesting the federal government's use of the War Measures Act in last October's terrorist kidnap crisis in Quebec heckled and shouted down Justice Minister John Turner Saturday night at the University of British Columbia.

Turner was delivering a speech as part of the Vancouver institute's weekly UBC lecture series. The topic of the speech he was prevented from making was "violence in modern society."

After the outburst, which included several scuffles between demonstrators and other persons in the audience, Mr. Turner told newsmen he was very disturbed.

"They seem to have replaced logic with slogans . . . we've had disruption instead of dialogue," he said.

. . . our violent society

In the text of his speech, released to newsmen earlier, the minister warned Canadians that "we'll have to face the threat of violence for some time in our society."

Later, Turner said: "I've run into a lot of heckling but this is the first time I've ever been prevented from speaking."

He said he wouldn't want to legislate against the kind of demonstration that disrupted the meeting.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Newfoundland teachers have voted 70 per cent in favor of continuing strike action to back up demands for wage increases from the Newfoundland government.

Strike action, which has been carried out on a selective basis, has involved 425 of the Newfoundland Teachers Association's 6,500 members.
